Student Life

Each day a myriad of new experiences . . .
the high school student pushes on . . .
through the drudgery of homework . . .
the learning experiences of lectures, discussions . . .
the pressures of tests . . .
games . . .
responsibilities . . .
enriching his life . . .
broadening his concept of the world . . .
moving on as a proud member of the Now Generation.

High Point is a school on a summit . . . in many ways.

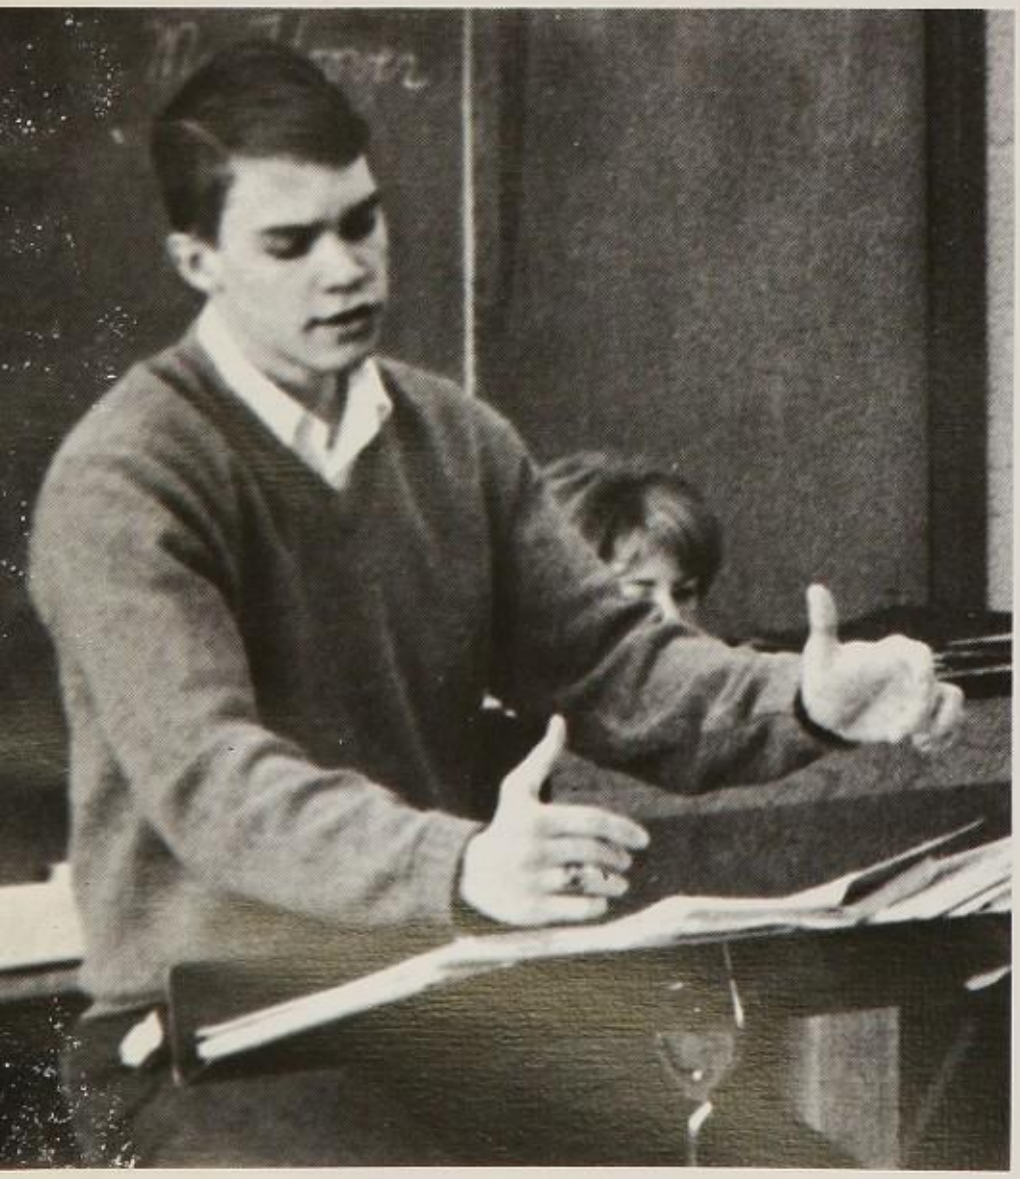
High Point Opens Doors to Future

Doors standing open . . . leading the way to a new world . . . an action scene . . . welcoming . . . inviting newcomers . . . accepting old members . . . swinging . . . as by-passers rush through . . . to happenings within . . . hurrying on their ways to the path of experience . . . challenge . . . after entering one takes part . . . young life is reviewed . . . academic standings defined . . . social activities planned . . . new acquaintances made . . . old faces seen . . . a sense of belonging felt by members . . . they accept their roles, make their marks . . . they contribute to the life within the doors.

A school is a reflection of an entire world.

Doors opening wide, the school is an invitation to strength and power.

"I'm sorry, we do not include the subject of 'How to get a Date,' in our curriculum."

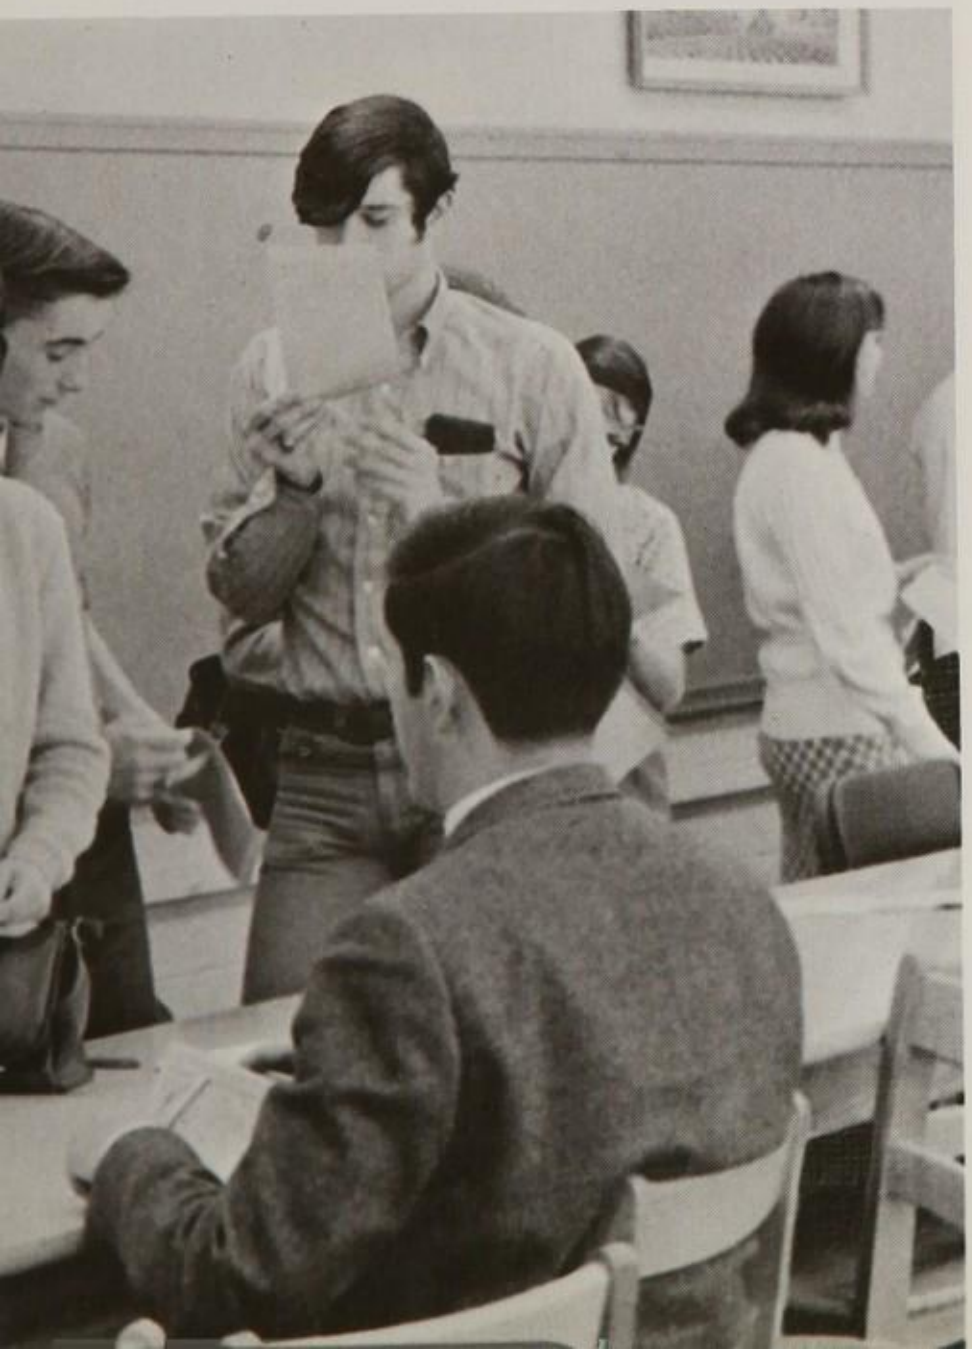


"Now choir members, open your mouths this wide — and sing!"

Seniors learn, first hand, about the "pay now — graduate later plan."

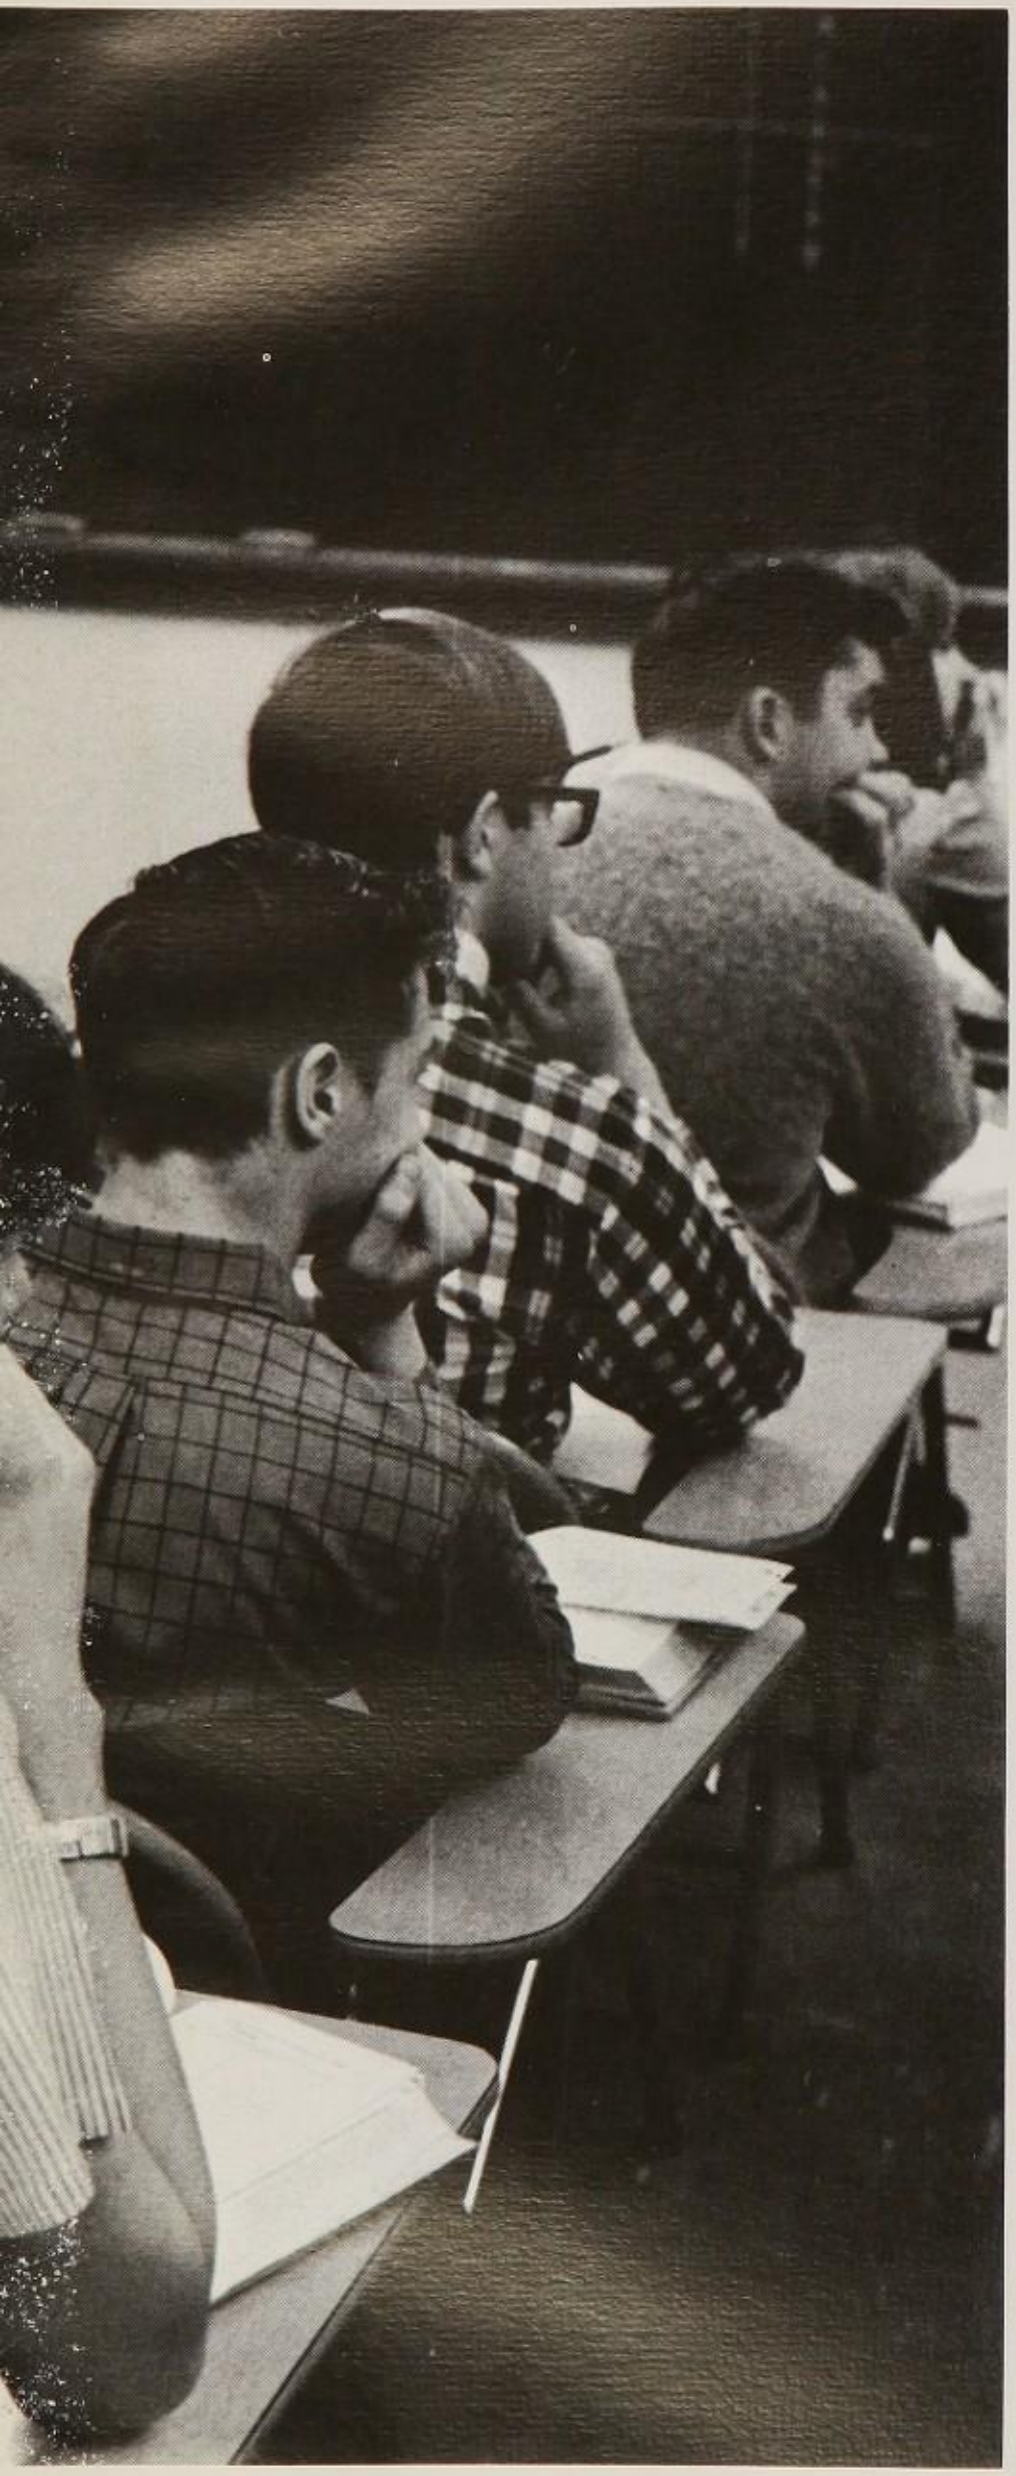
Each Class Searches for Its Mark of Distinction

Unaware of the hazards of high school, sophomores get lost in the maze of hallways and stairwells . . . are intimidated by teachers . . . purchase food at lunch . . . go to the wrong classes . . . have continual trouble with their lockers. Juniors, accustomed to the rigors of school life, receive detention for milling in the hallways . . . race to reach a portable . . . search for an elusive book in the library . . . forget assignments. Seniors, with school work second hand and last in thought to them, mill outside and inside homerooms . . . daydream . . . look forward to graduation.



As the middle class at High Point, Juniors must reach a little higher.

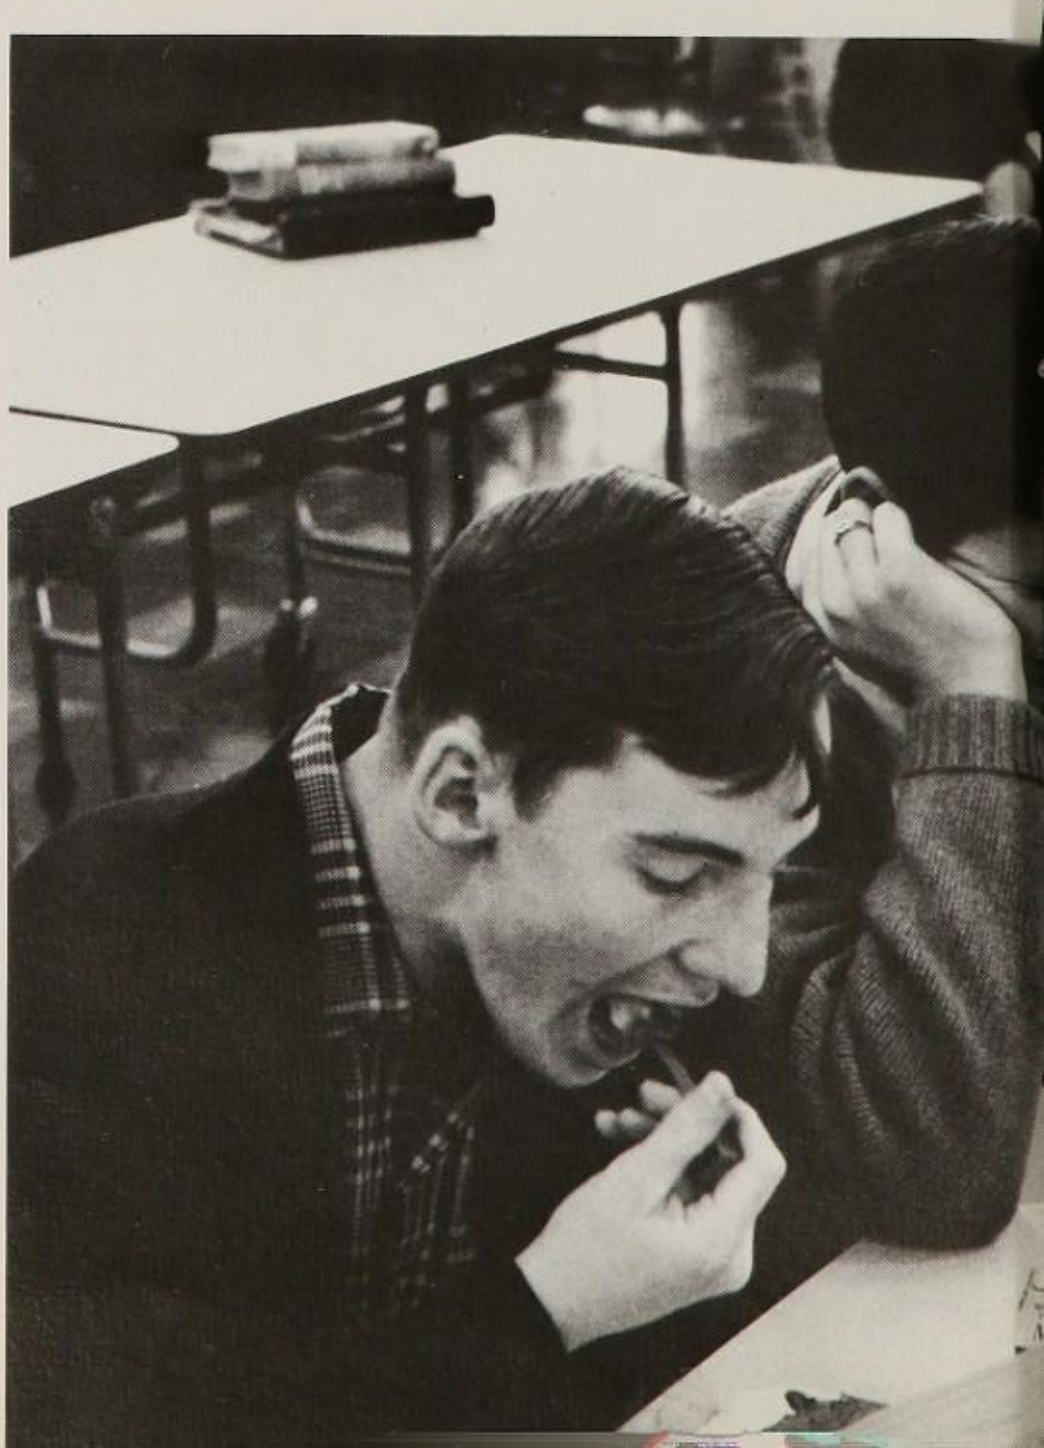
Every Day Makes Its Own Contribution to the



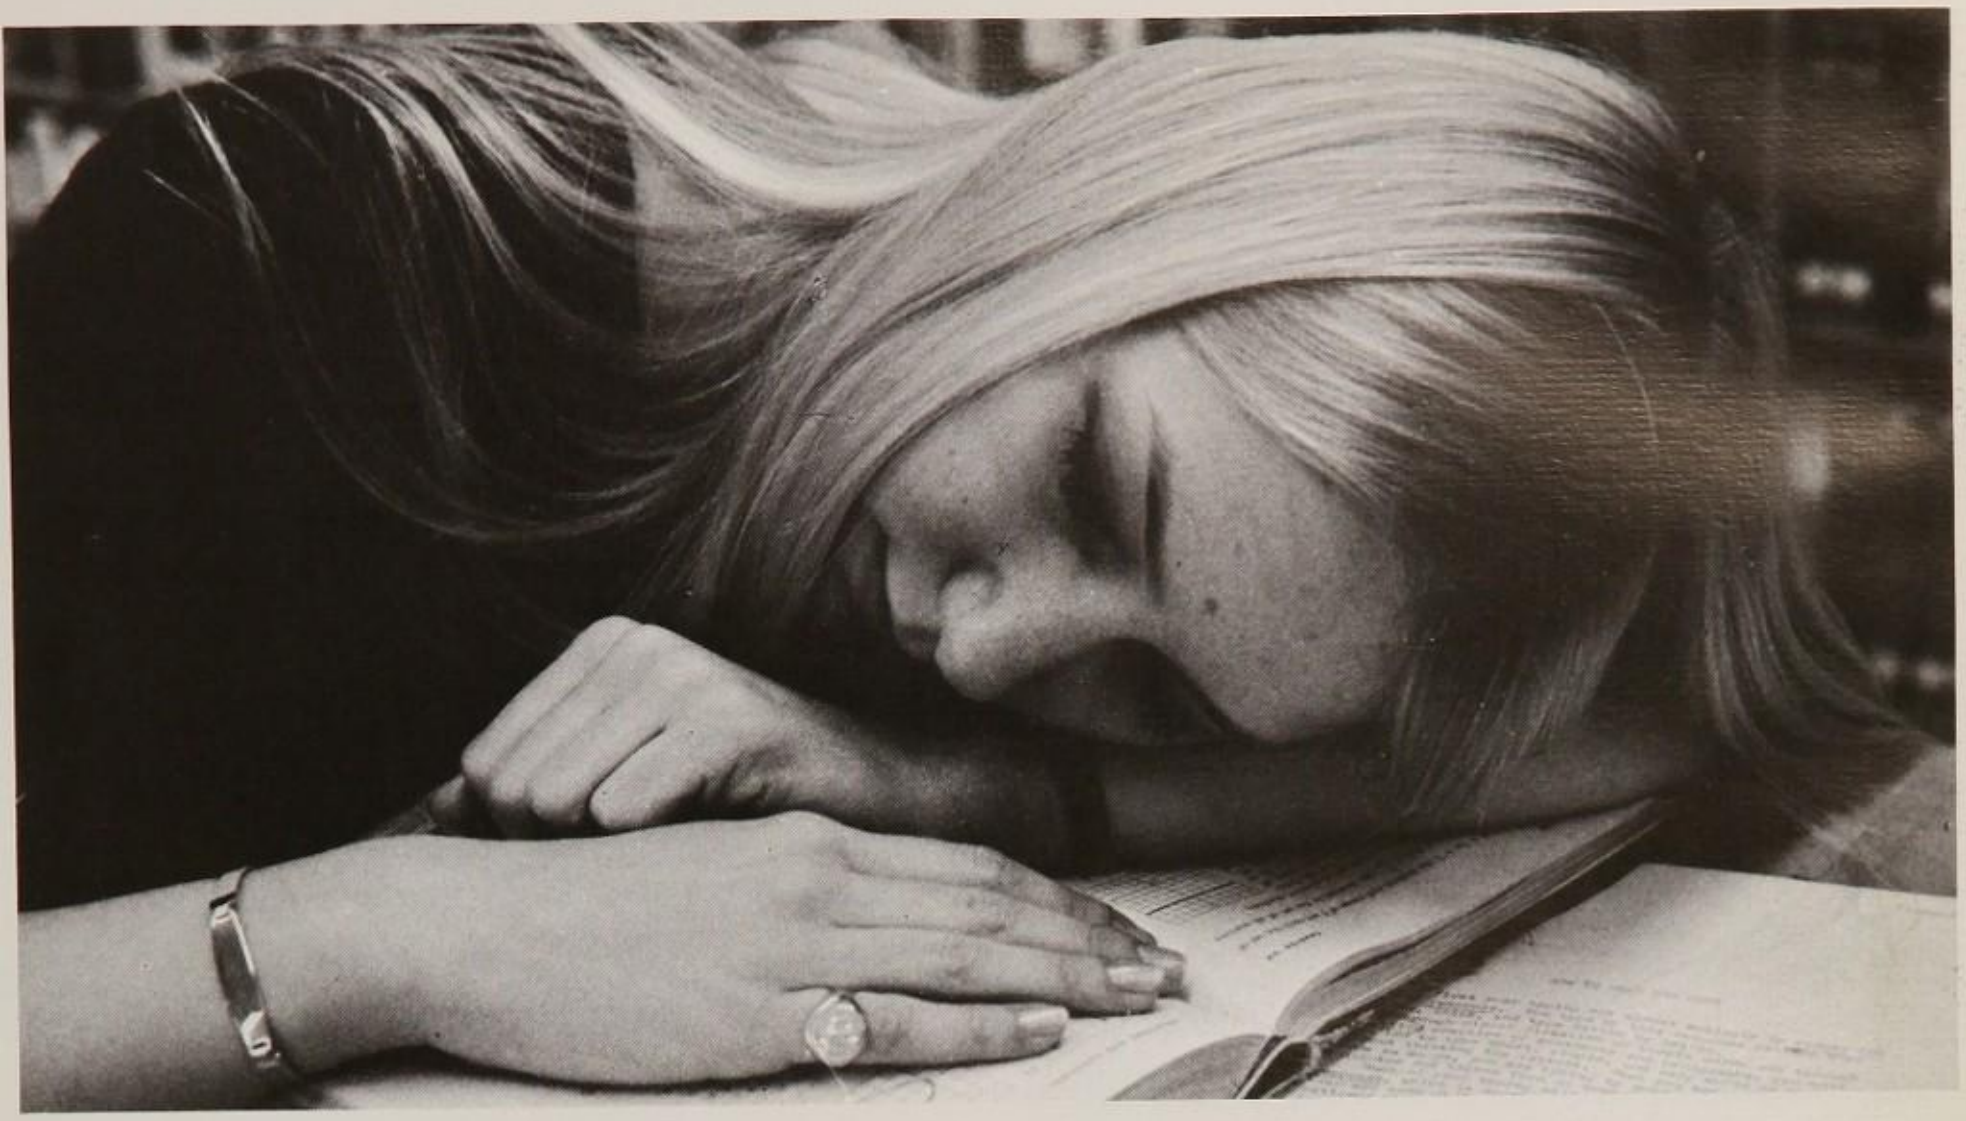
At the beginning of the day, all High Pointers are "Thinkers."

Students . . . walking in from the parking lot . . . stepping off the buses . . . greeting friends . . . conversing in the halls . . . "Hey! We've got one minute to get to room 332 from the portables!" . . . rushed routine . . . participation in class . . . some benefit from every experience . . . "How could I possibly have typed a negative 25 words?" . . . joining activities . . . whether behind the scenes of a play or cheering on a basketball court . . . after school . . . "My locker's jammed, and my bus leaves in five minutes." . . . discussing events of the day and future plans . . . taking time out to work on the term paper . . . all members of High Point are involved . . . meeting challenges of student life and keeping pace with the action.

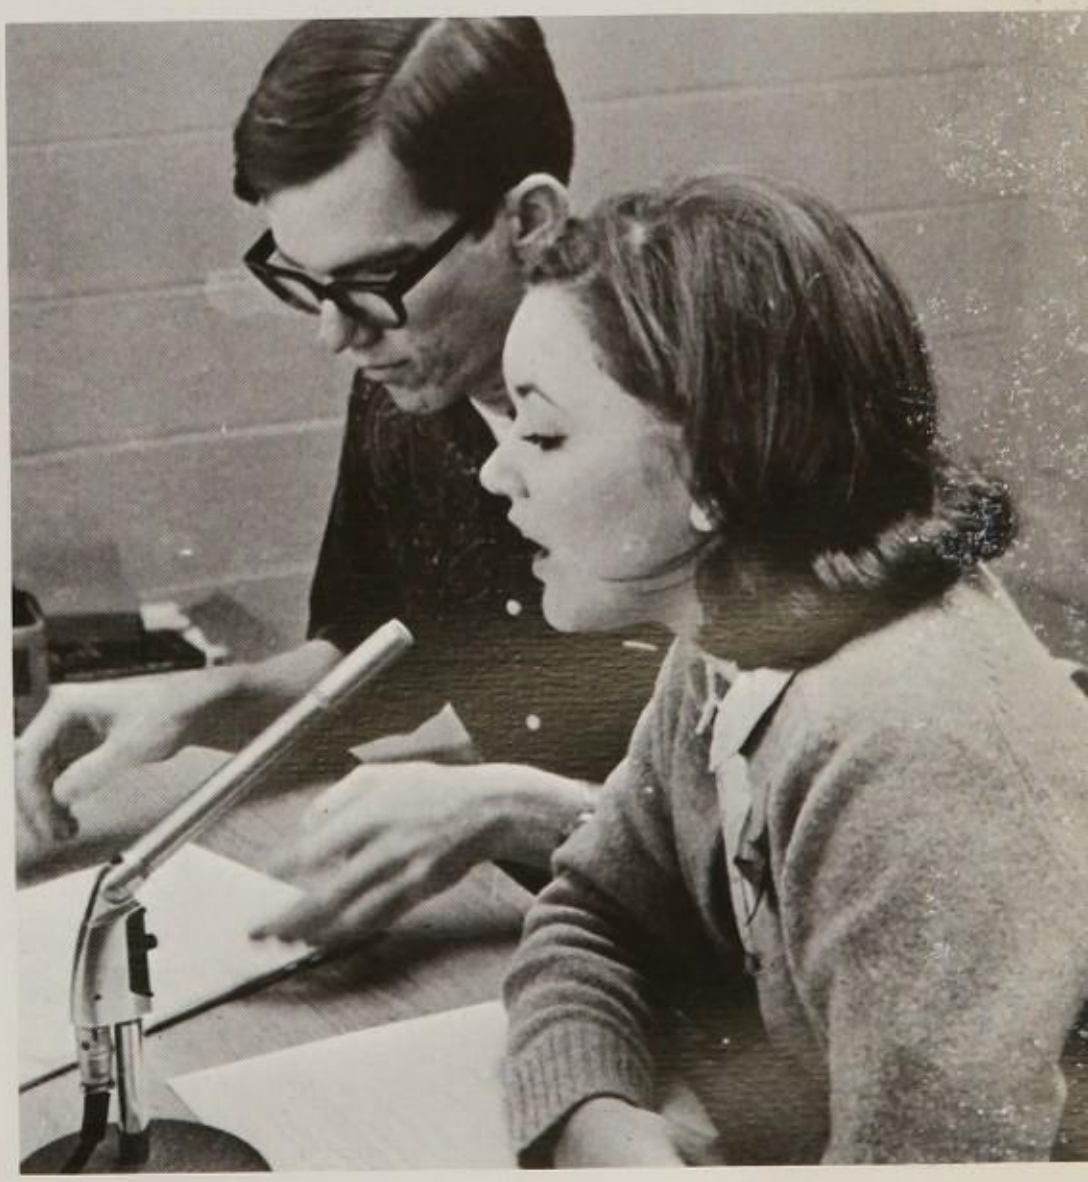
Remaining physically fit and mentally alert, the High Pointer becomes the perfect example of a well-rounded student.



Academic Life



At the conclusion of a mad day, students pause to relax.



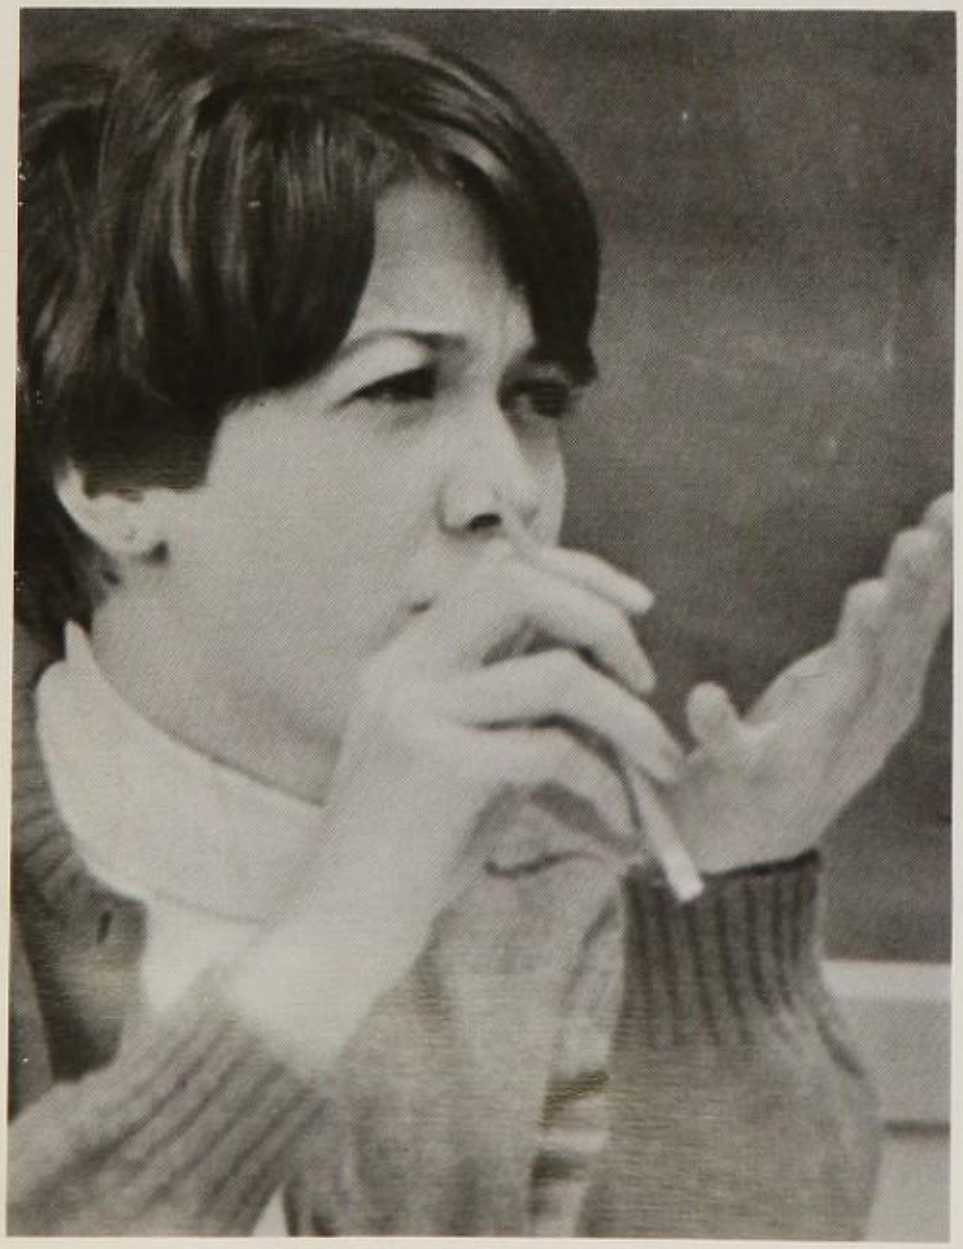
". . . with your afternoon Hi-lites." At last, the day is over.

Some High Pointers ascertain their academic goals, while others learn that they must try harder.

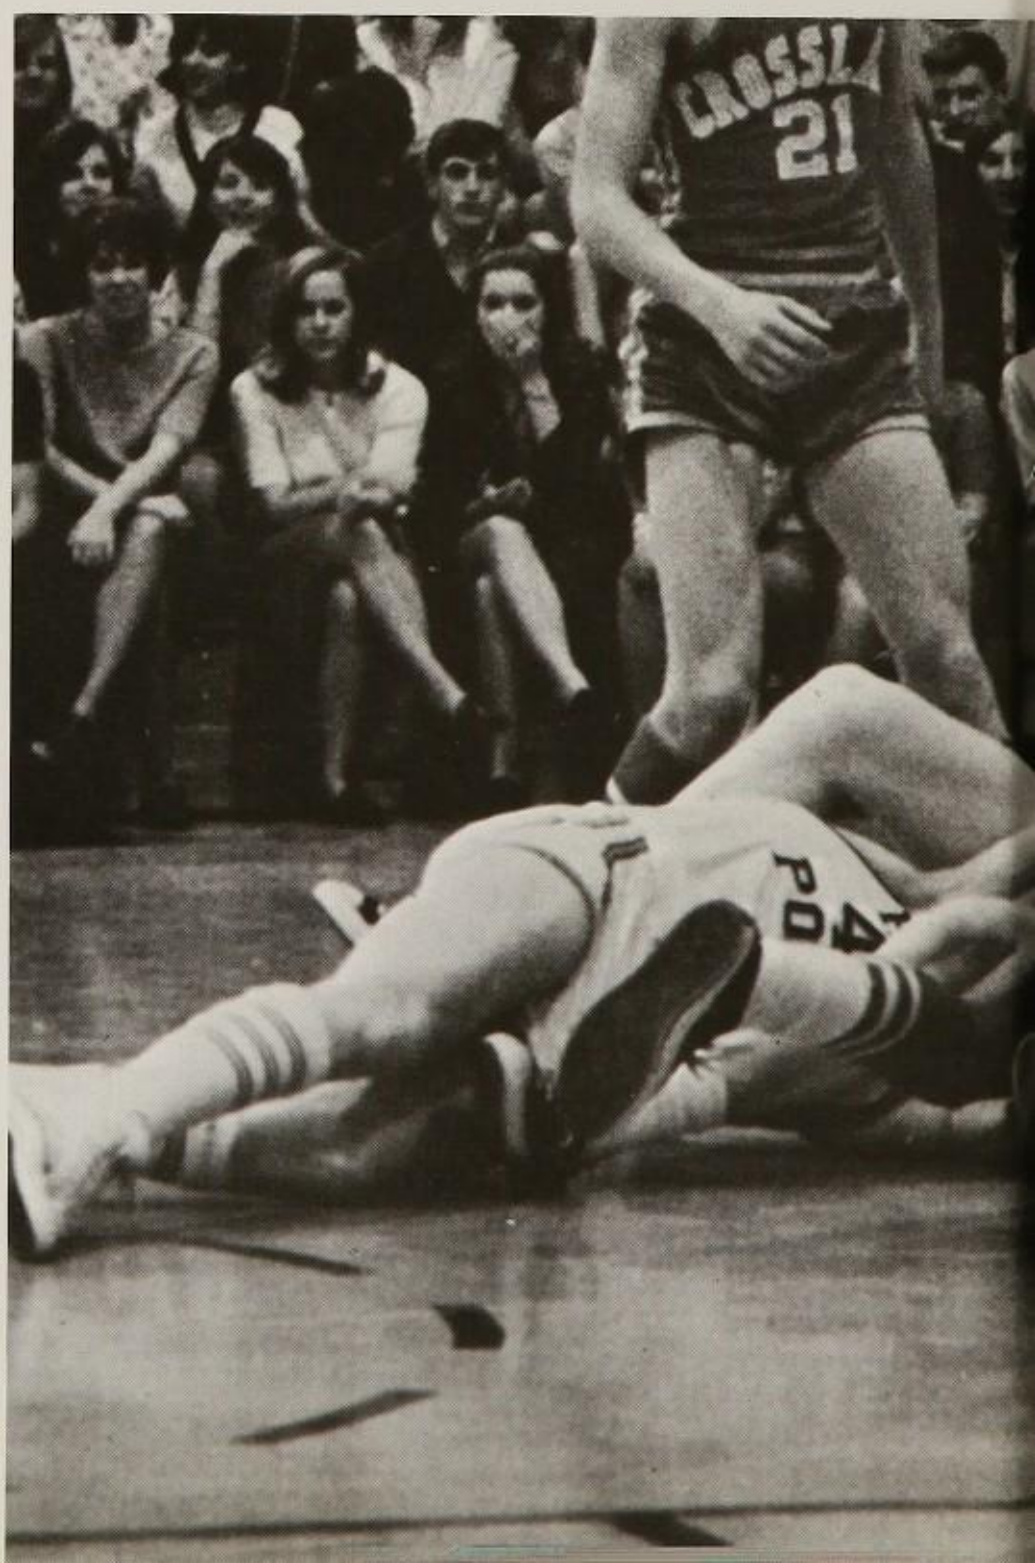
Achievement Demands Diligent Effort

Achievements . . . products of much striving and devotion . . . fulfillments of hopes . . . results of strong desires to achieve worthwhile goals . . . to attain a prominent place . . . to gain recognition in work . . . aftermaths of struggling, discovering new methods, and watching them work . . . exercising abilities to the utmost as one sets forth his attributes . . . best qualities shine through as talents are displayed . . . those successful are proud, as they have achieved their goals — those goals well deserved and honored . . . a worthwhile degree of satisfaction has been reached by many.

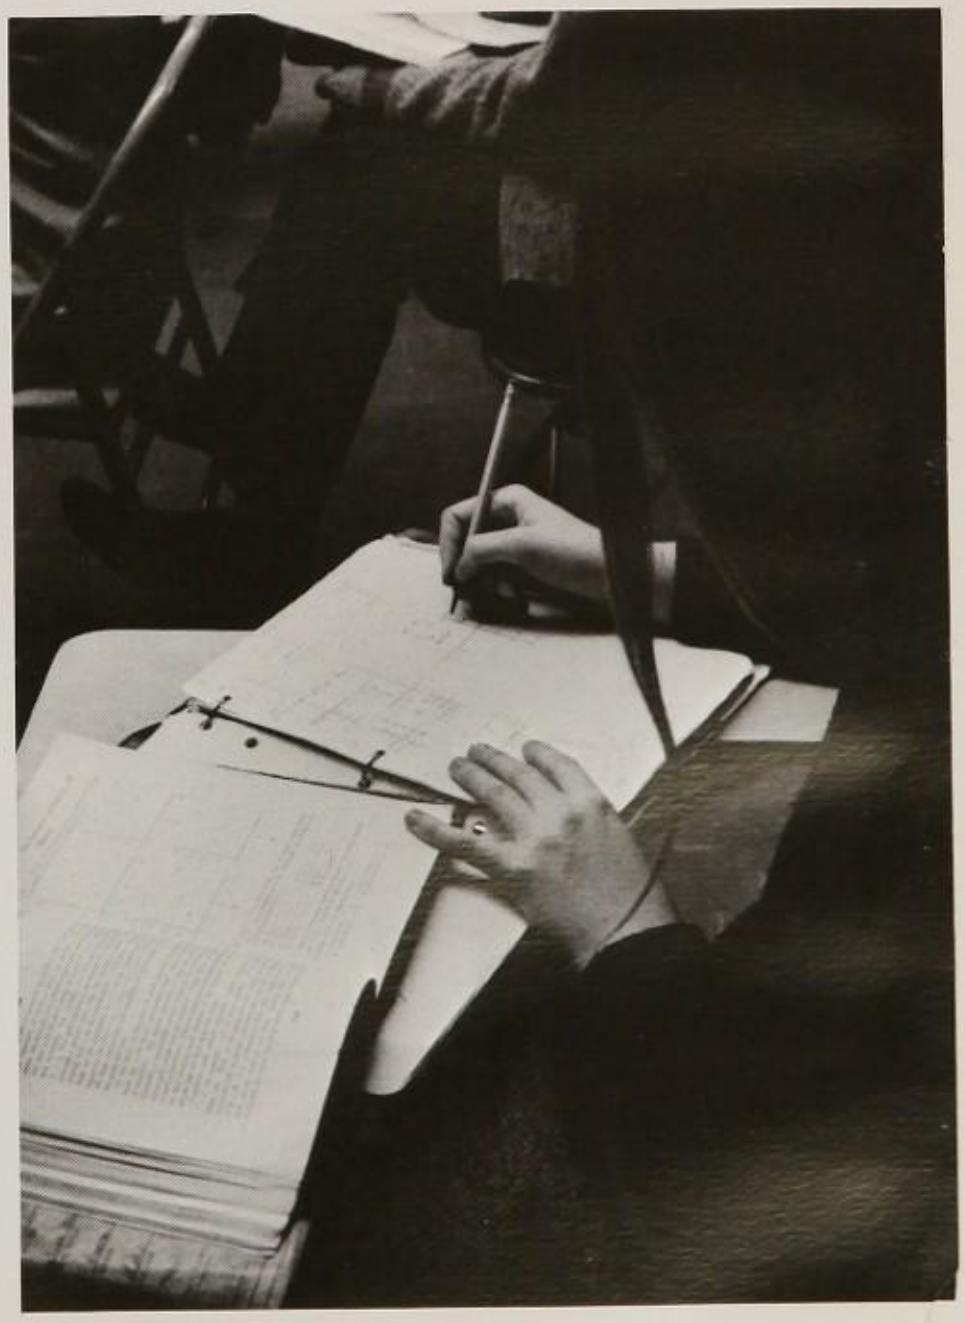
Achievement has its downfalls.



Emphasizing a point, Chris Bassett makes use of her hands as well as her mouth.



High Point's "Pied Pipers" of the Symphonic Band learn that practice is the only way to achievement.

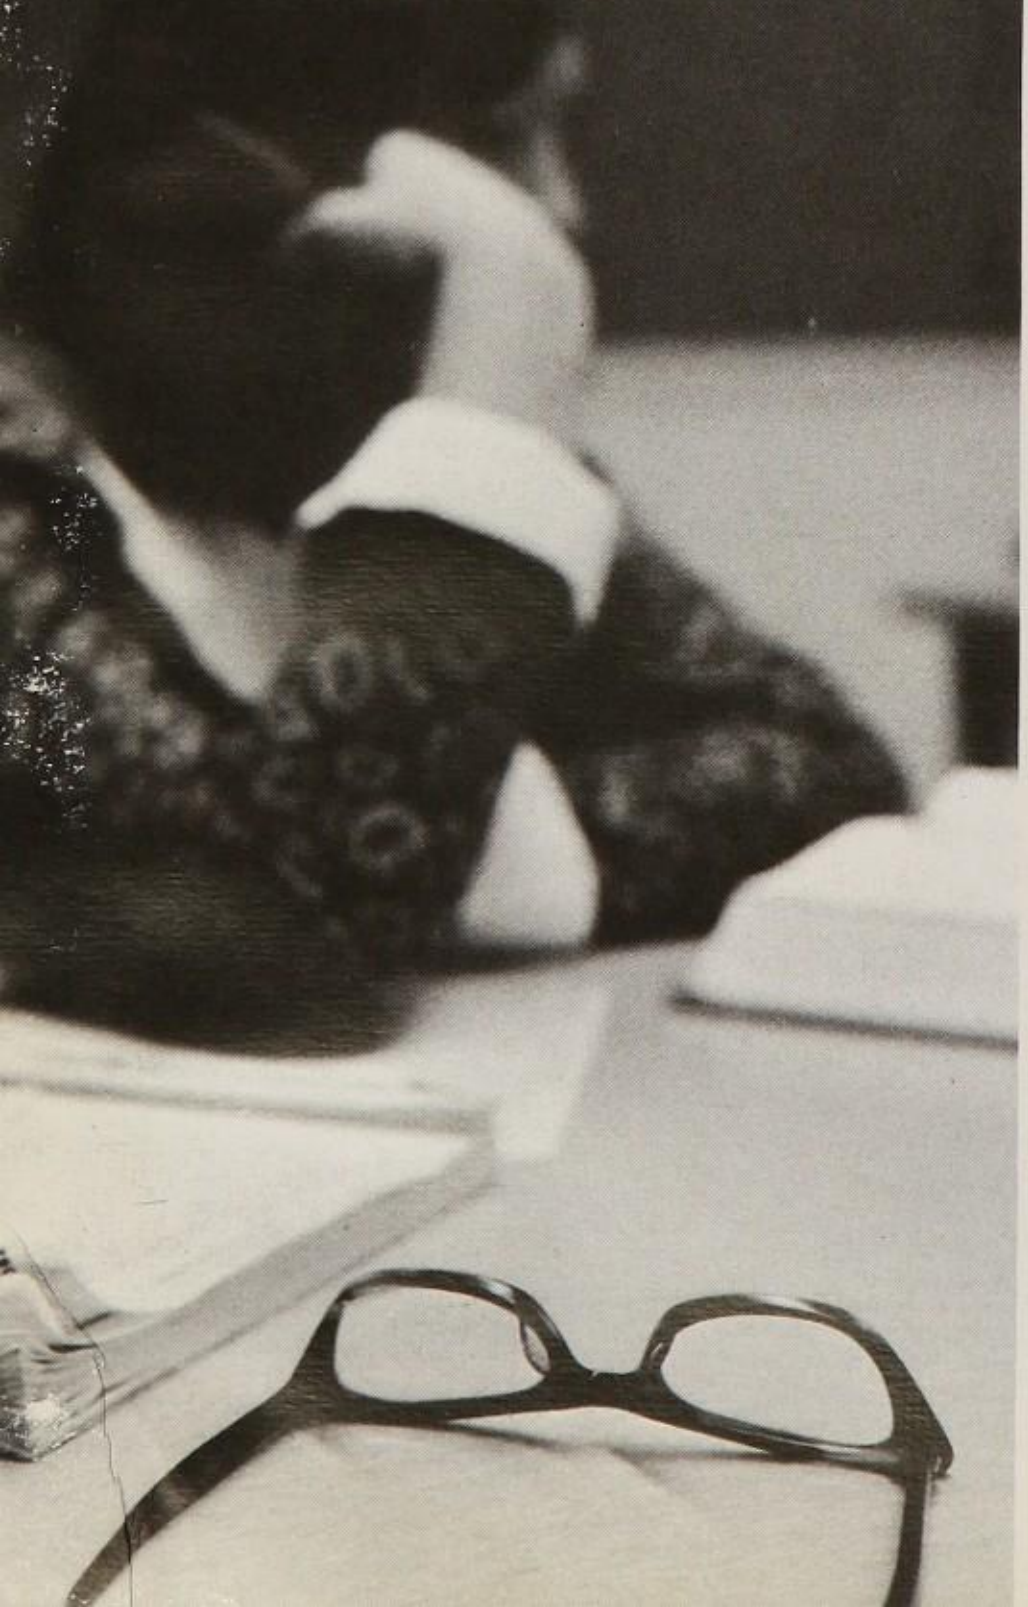


Before you goof, think — then goof!

Time Waits For No One

The summer's end . . . the school year's beginning friendships renewed . . . a year of decision lies ahead . . . the trees drop their colored protection . . . football games instill students with school pride and spirit . . . homecoming . . . winter arrives . . . snowdays provide needed break in dull routine . . . Christmas . . . the New Year's demands . . . Friday night hops . . . the tribulation of semester's end . . . spring arrives . . . life begins anew . . . new determination in the students' weary minds . . . the magnificence of Blue and Gold pleases all . . . proms, with one foot in the past and the other in the future, inspire the students . . . the final days arrive . . . the warm breeze distracts attentions . . . promotion . . . the school doors close.

Wandering, dreaming, drifting, thoughts fly with the moments.

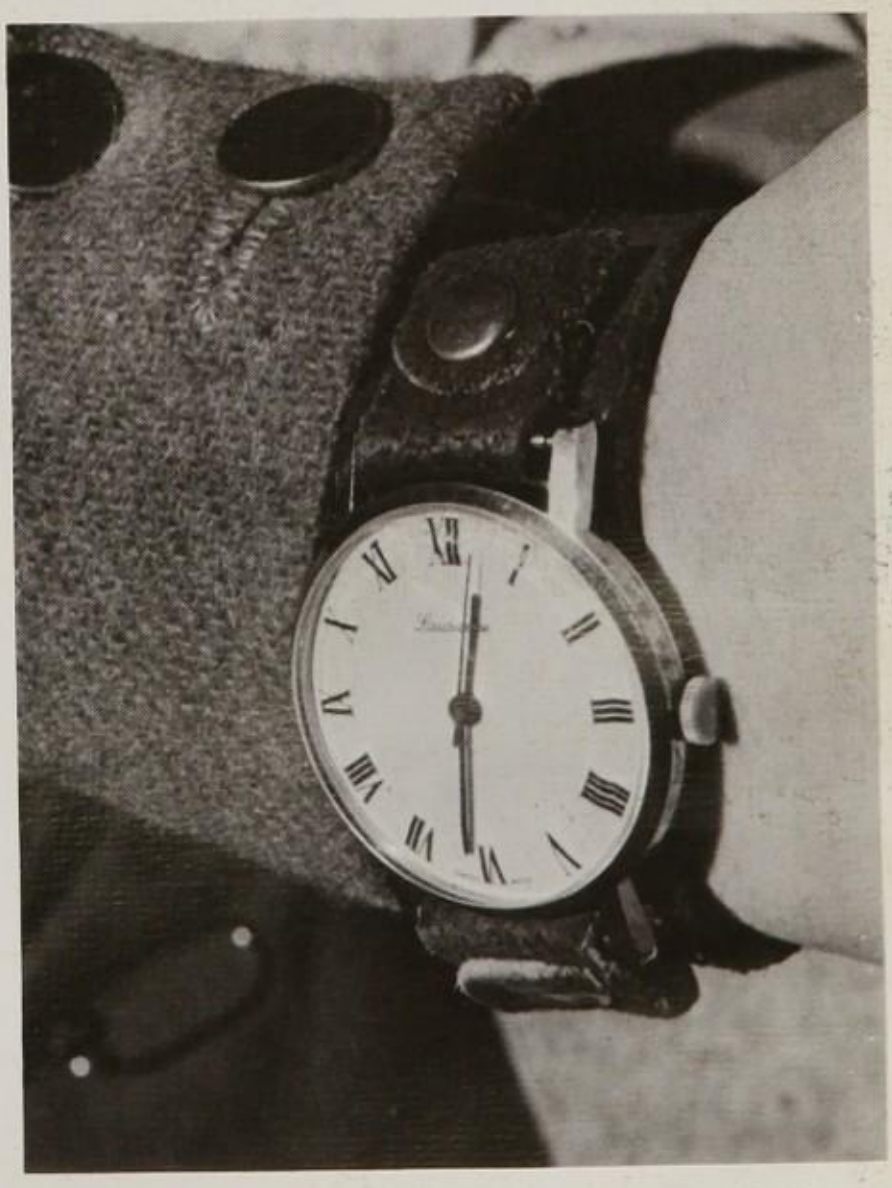


Finally, the dreary day ends perfectly — with rain.

"How many miles did they say it was to the next class?"

Heavy jackets and red noses reflect the arrival of winter.

Studying becomes more difficult with the arrival of spring.



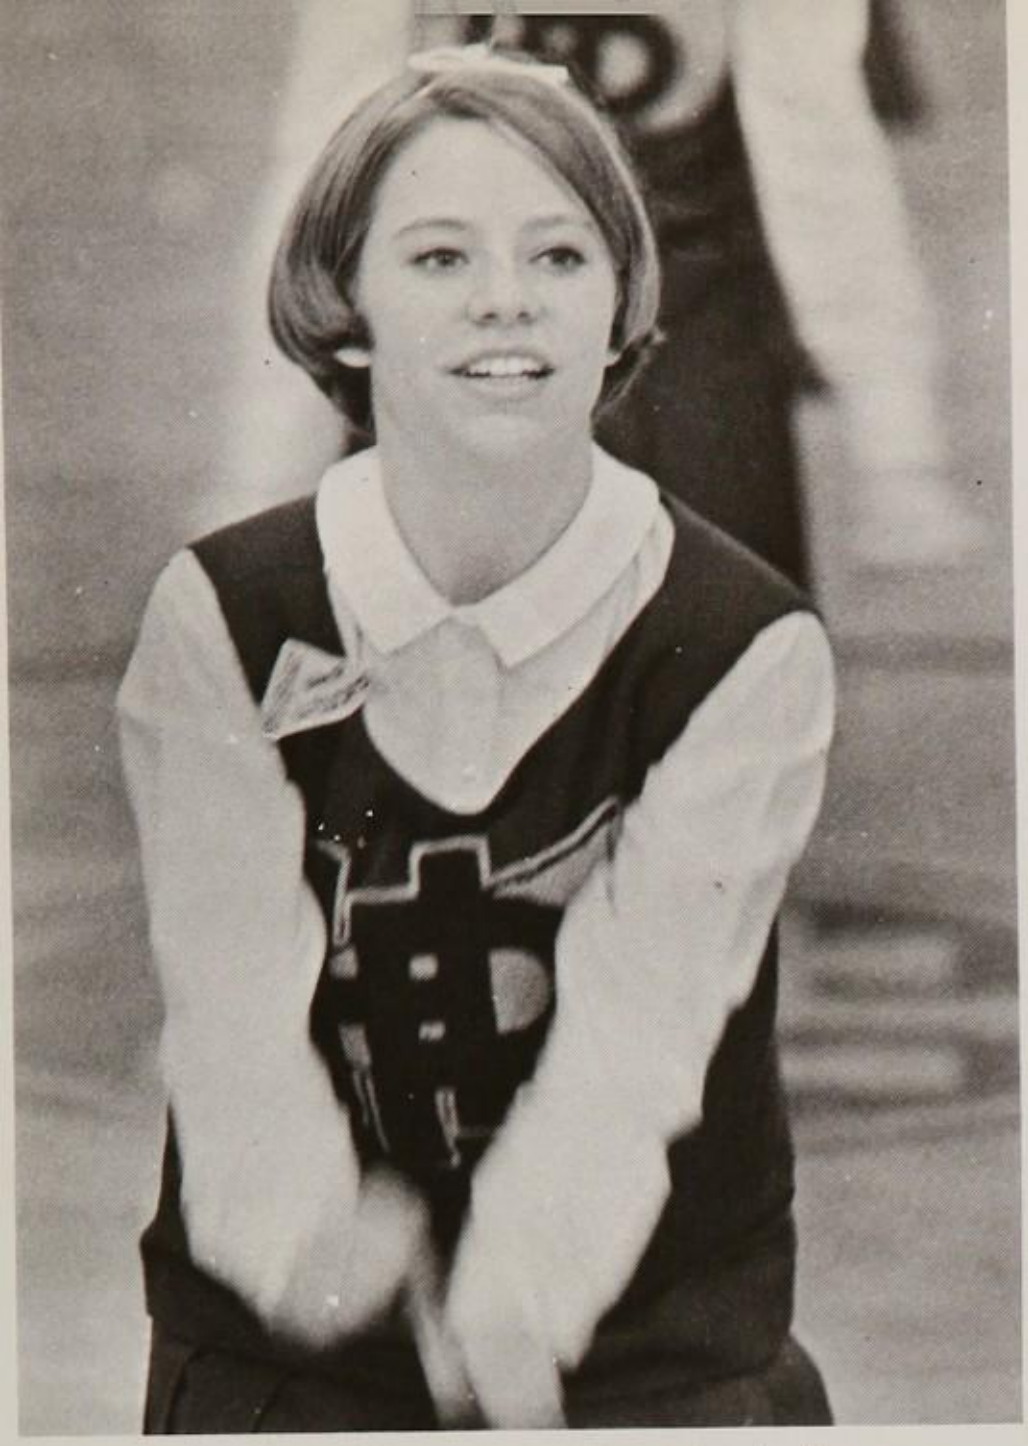
Consulting "Big Ben," a student finds the day half over.

After many hours of simulated and classroom driving instruction, the license hopeful, at last, takes the wheel.

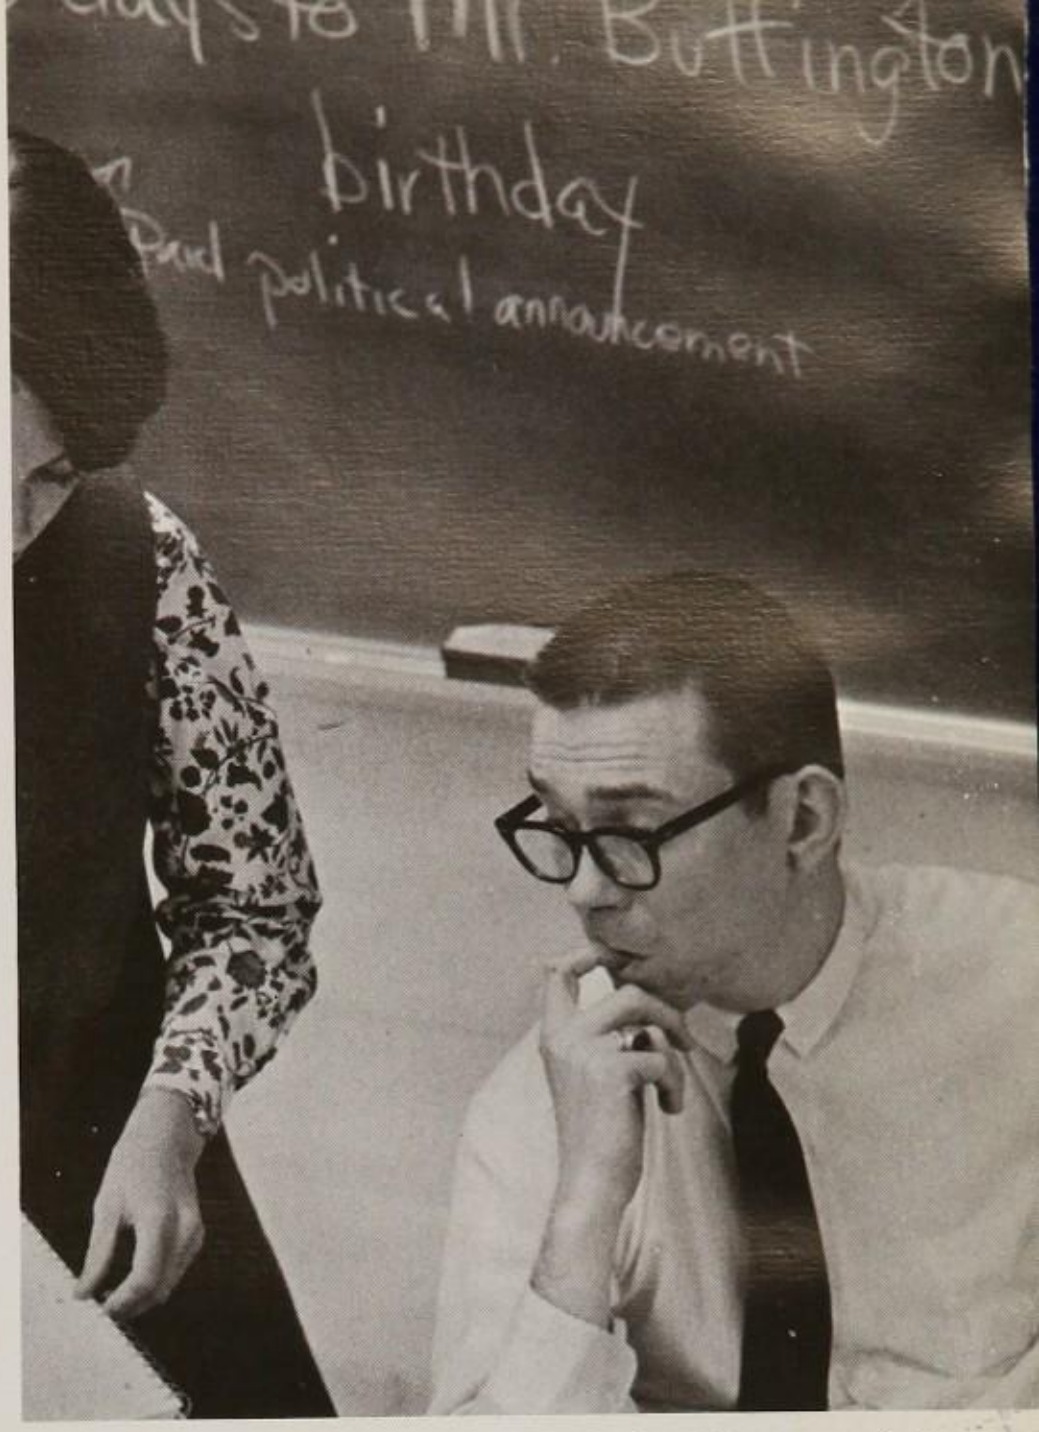
Pathways of Progress Lead High Point to Perfection

Perfection, strived for throughout the school year by the students, may never be achieved, but the constant effort rewards the students. A young artist strives for perfection in painting a landscape . . . mastery over a car is approached . . . classroom work piles up and thoughts become deep . . . trophies stand tribute to past victories . . . cheerleaders encourage the players to strive for more trophies. Perfection-the goal in the classroom, on the court, in the clubs — is constantly worked for as the students engage in different activities throughout the year . . . Sports come and go . . . drama takes the stage and then passes . . . extracurricular activities continue throughout the year . . . the overriding activity, though, is academic work, and perfection is the cornerstone on which all rests.

A brush, some paint, and determination turn a blank sheet of paper into a winter wonderland.



Through practice, precision, and timing, cheerleaders represent High Point in victory.



The ultimate goal of a student — the bewilderment of a teacher.

Trophies stand as a symbol of past achievements.

Students Expand Knowledge Through Studies

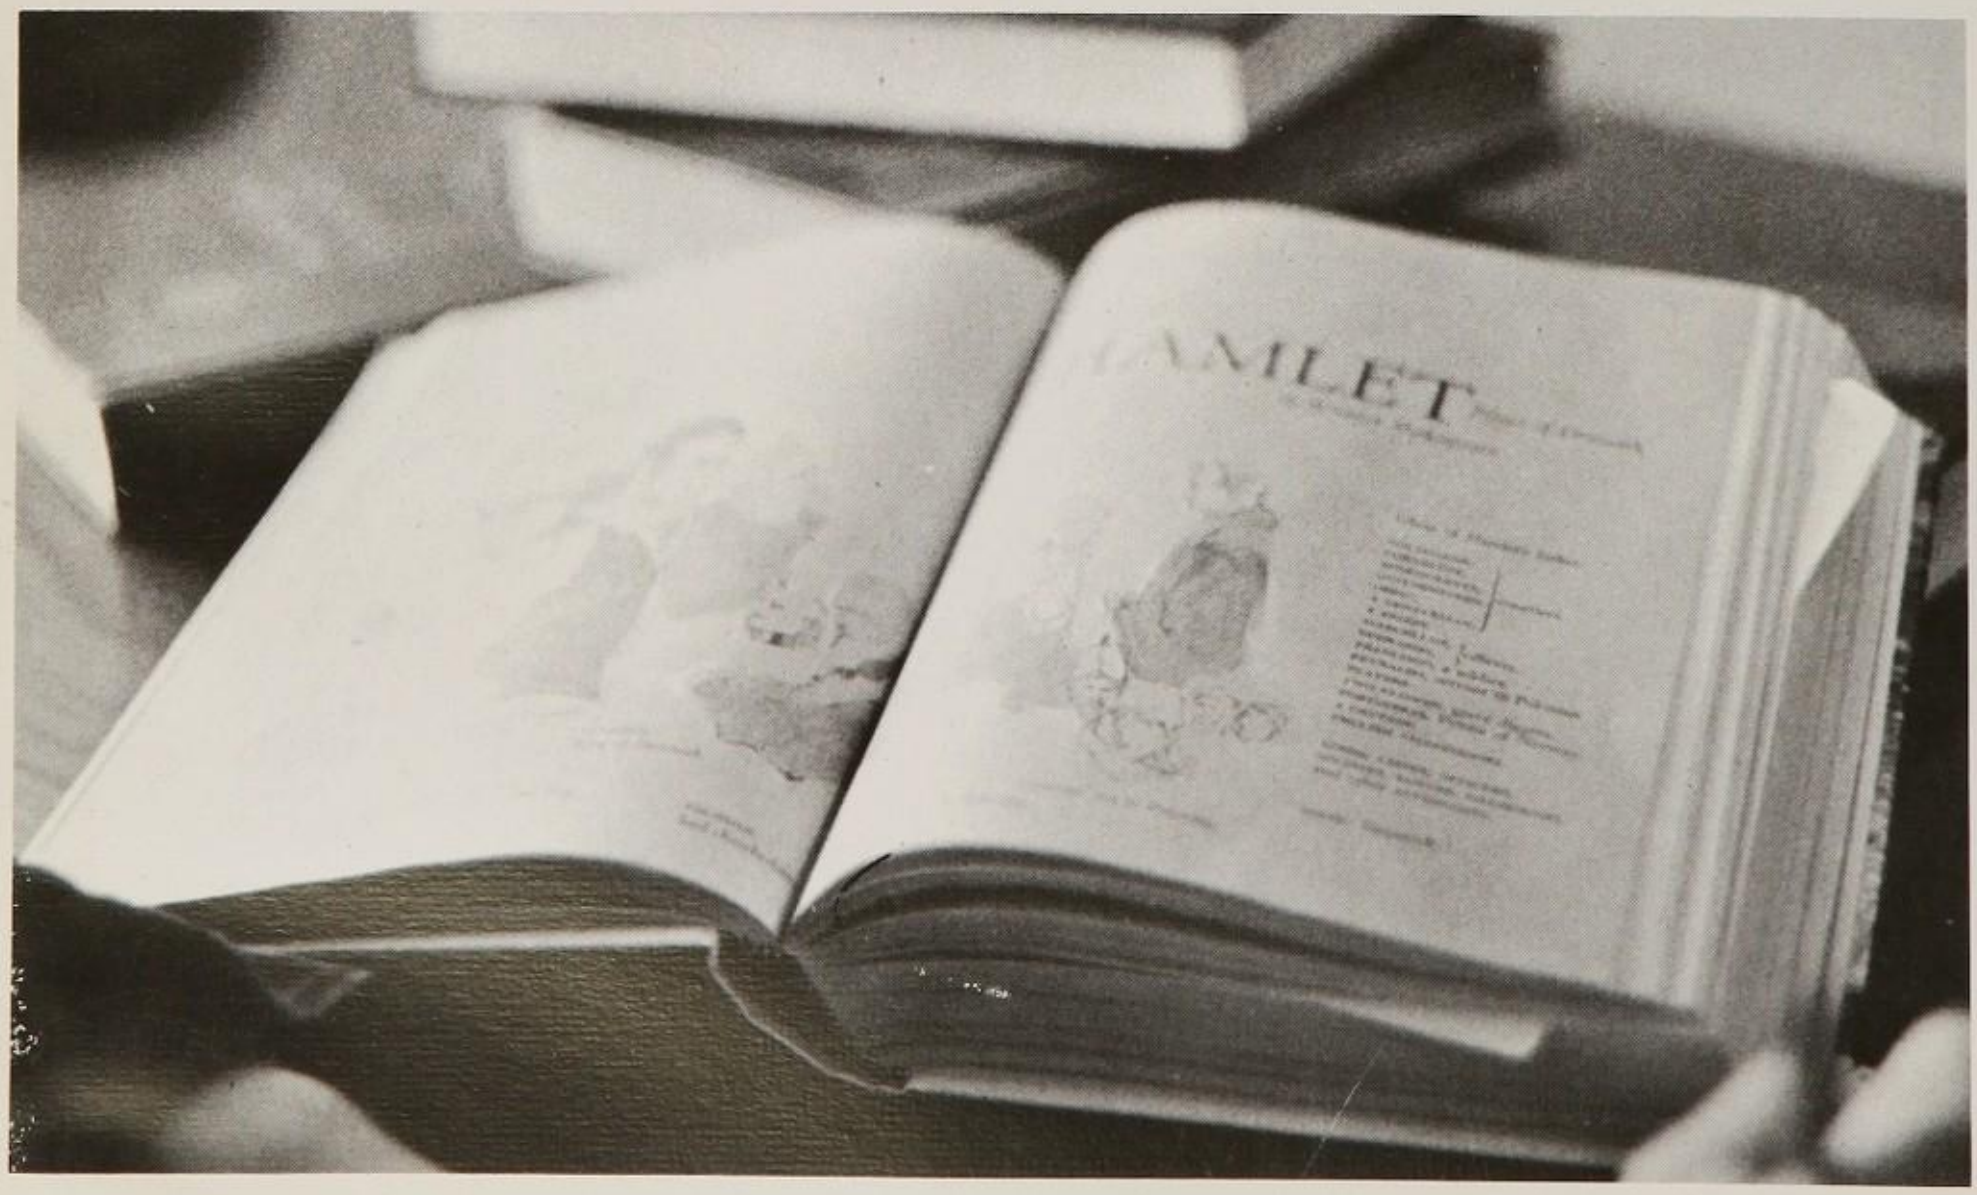
Struggling over punctuation, scooping the latest news, and analyzing a masterpiece of literature — These were the '68 happenings of English studies.

Doses of grammar, punctuation, speaking, listening, composition, and types of literature were spooned into sophomores. Traveling around the world, they flew to Mt. Olympus with Mercury and visited in Rome with Julius Caesar. Juniors compounded skills learned in English III with special emphasis on the paragraph. Then hustled away by American literature, they stood on the scaffold with Hester Prynne and Reverend Dimmsdale in The Scarlet Letter and retreated to the simplicity of Walden Pond with Thoreau. The summit was finally scaled by seniors who learned how to speak and write effectively. In the study of English literature, they battled side by side with Beowulf and stood at Runnymede, watching King John sign the Magna Charta.

Students investigated and probed the school newspaper and yearbook in Journalism I. As reporters ran in hot pursuit of news for the Beacon in Journalism II, and camera clickers, layout artists, and copy writers distributed their talents to the Eyry, deadlines were met; the presses rolled; the finished products appeared; and record sales were recorded.

Then bookworms poured over comparative literature samples, while writers penned their talents in advanced composition.

Before the year escapes, seniors become acquainted with the famous Danish prince.



David Via struggles to fit together the pieces and thus create a symmetrical layout in Journalism I.

Future Voters Explore World Problems

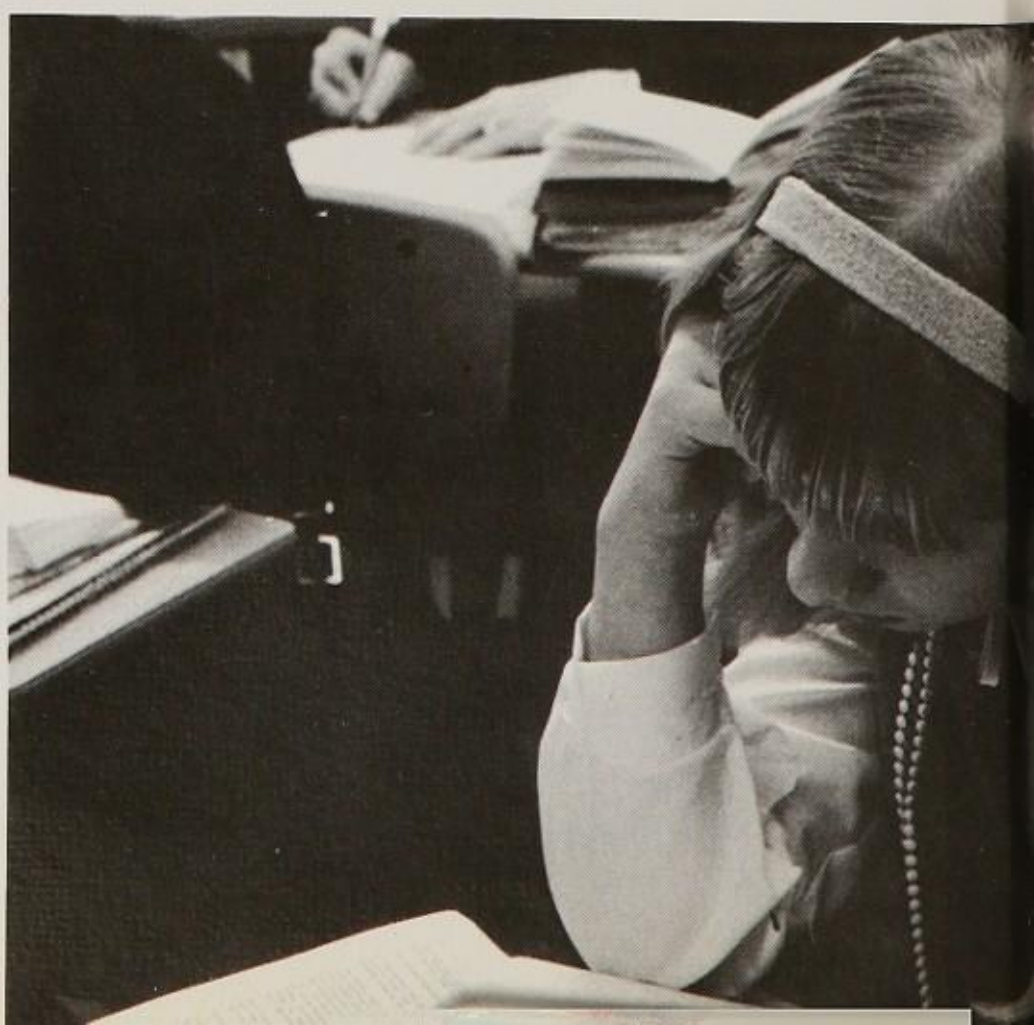
"Women are far superior to men."

"All women are stupid."

With these and other gems of knowledge, students began to investigate ideas and facts of the past, present, and possible future. It took a long time, but finally high school inhabitants learned what really happened and is happening.

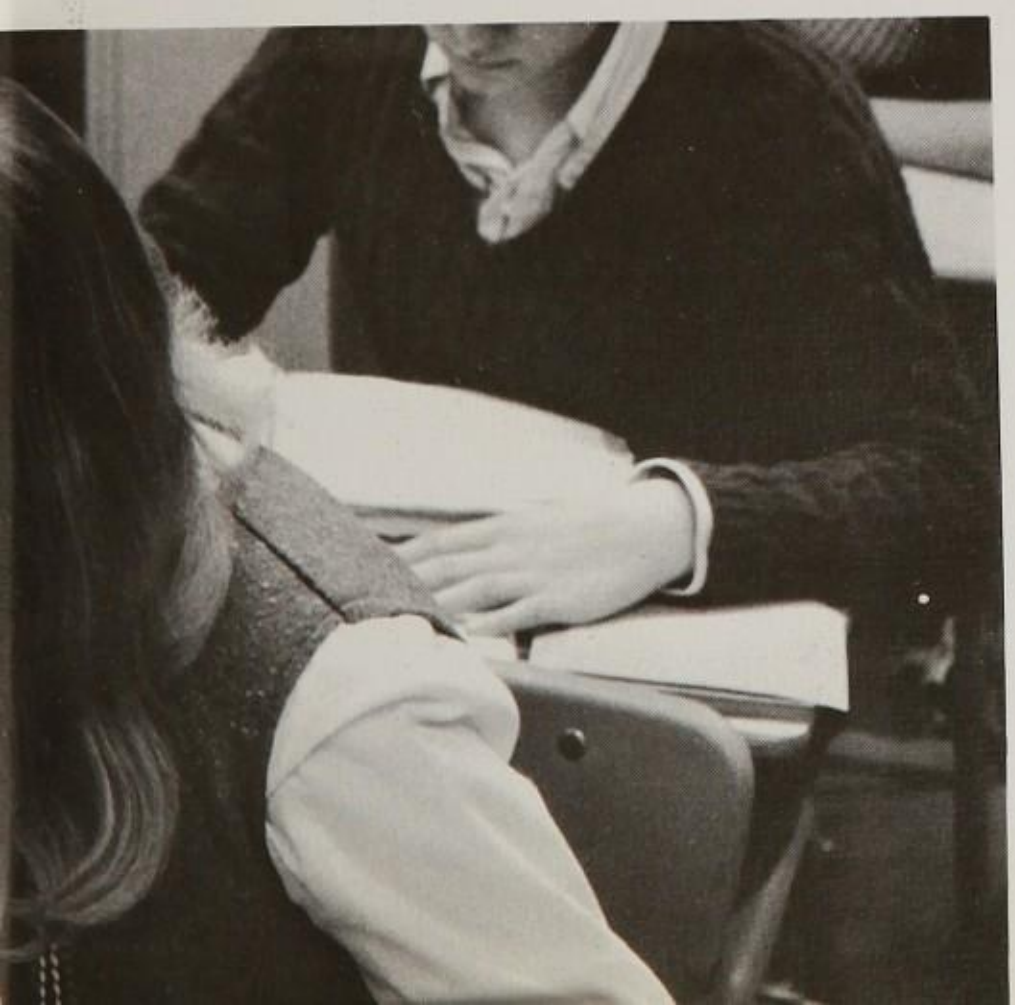
In a world that takes 90 minutes to circle by rocket, it is helpful to understand the people, places, ideas and conflicts that make up the small eliptical spheroid.

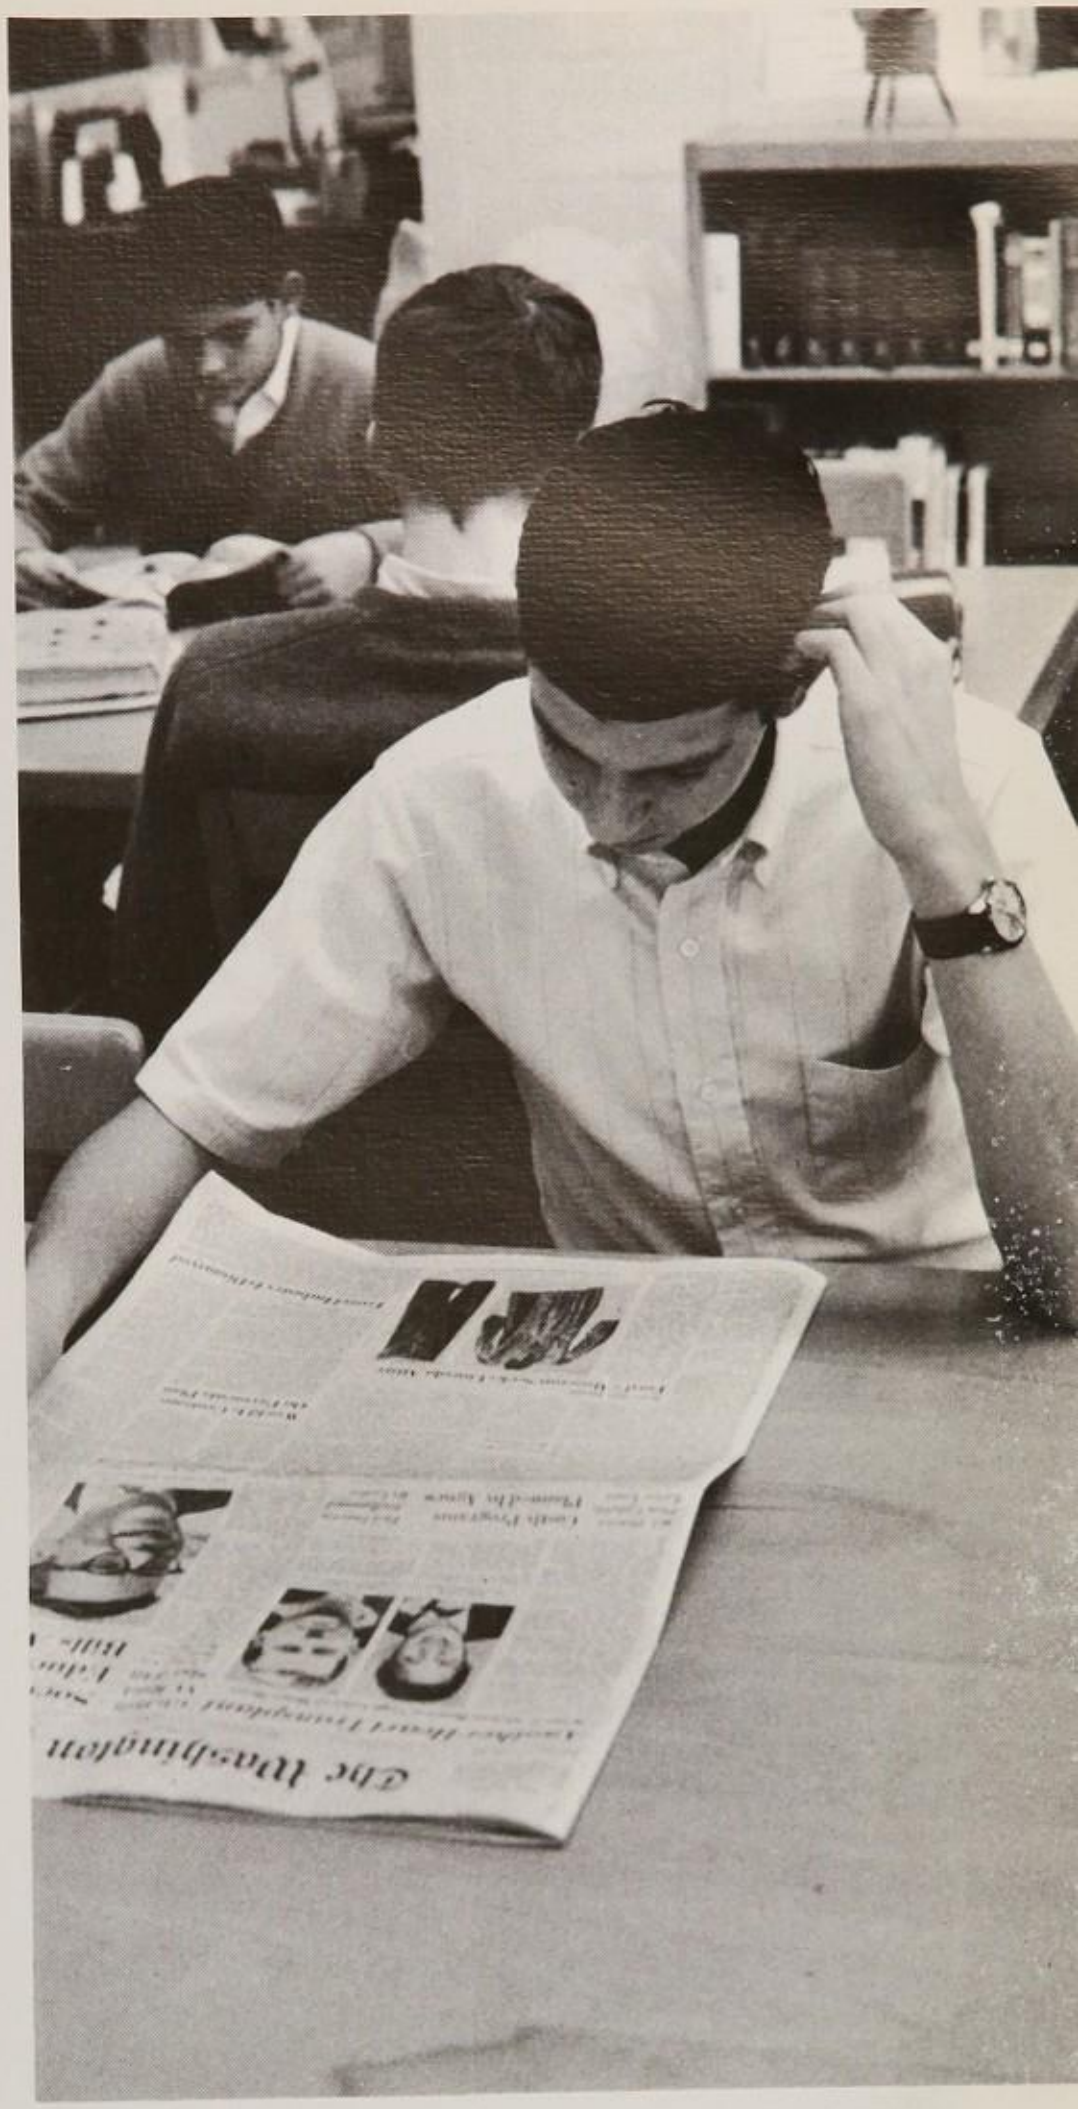
World history and world geography offered a look at the earth, past and present. And U. S. history might have given some the feeling that they had hear everything somewhere before. But P.O.D. offered young people a chance to study the preplexing world, while psychology covered the unpredictable human being.



Outlined by a current bulletin board, a psychology class discusses a possible solution to a contemporary problem.

A student indulges in another world history assignment.





A free library period affords a chance to catch up on the "now" happenings of the day.

Scientists of Tomorrow Study the Conditions of Today

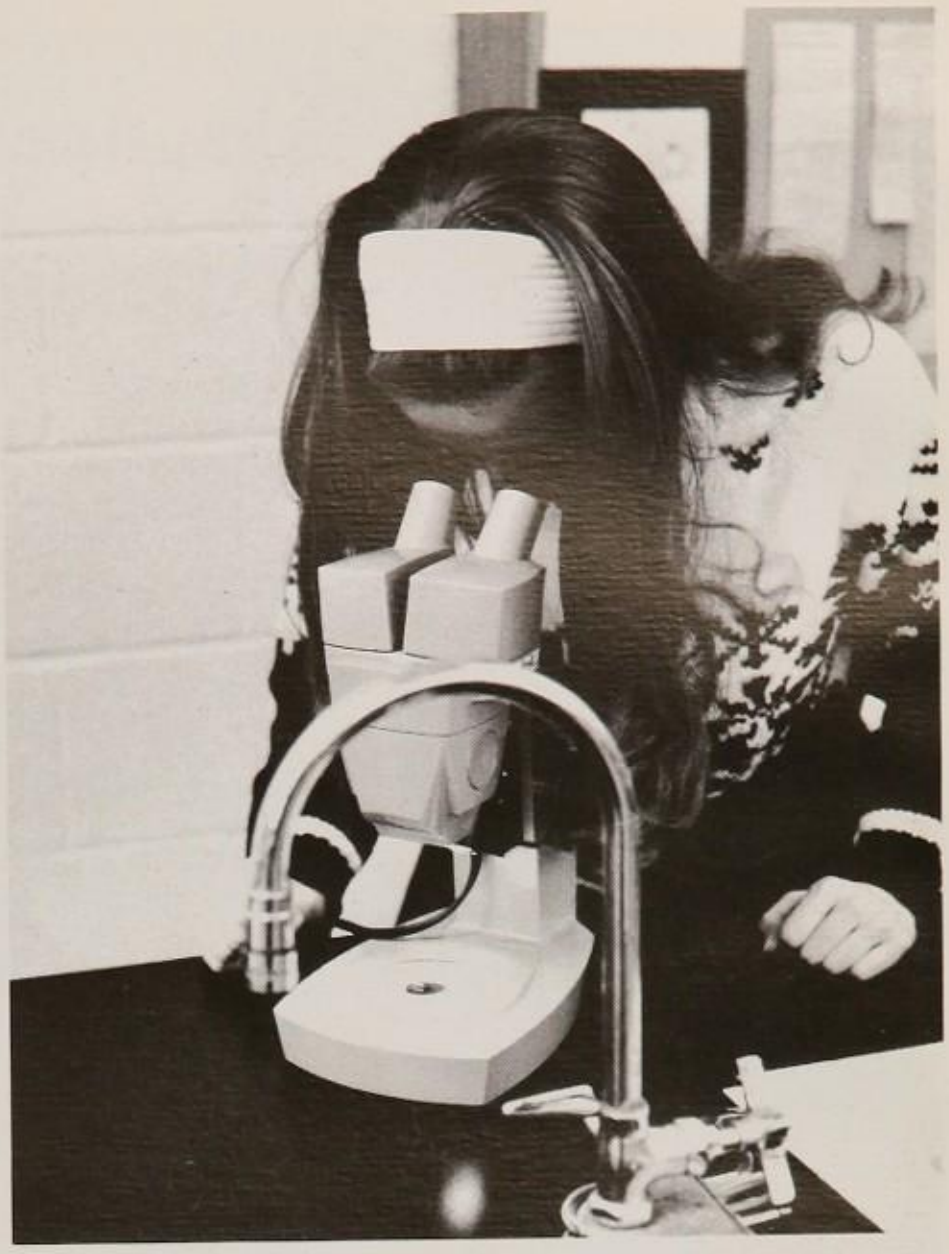
Pots boiled, fumes permeated the air, and mysterious formulas appeared on the board — eventful occurrences performed not in some mad professor's lab, but in the math and science classes.

Formaldehydic memories of dissecting frogs and memorizing the parts of a flower still linger with biology students. Chemistry pupils plunged into the study of matter with lab experiments and perhaps a few minor explosions. "Amateur Einsteins" contemplated theories of light, electricity, and other physical laws. In physical science classes the essence of basics such as botany, geology, astronomy, and chemistry were recalled.

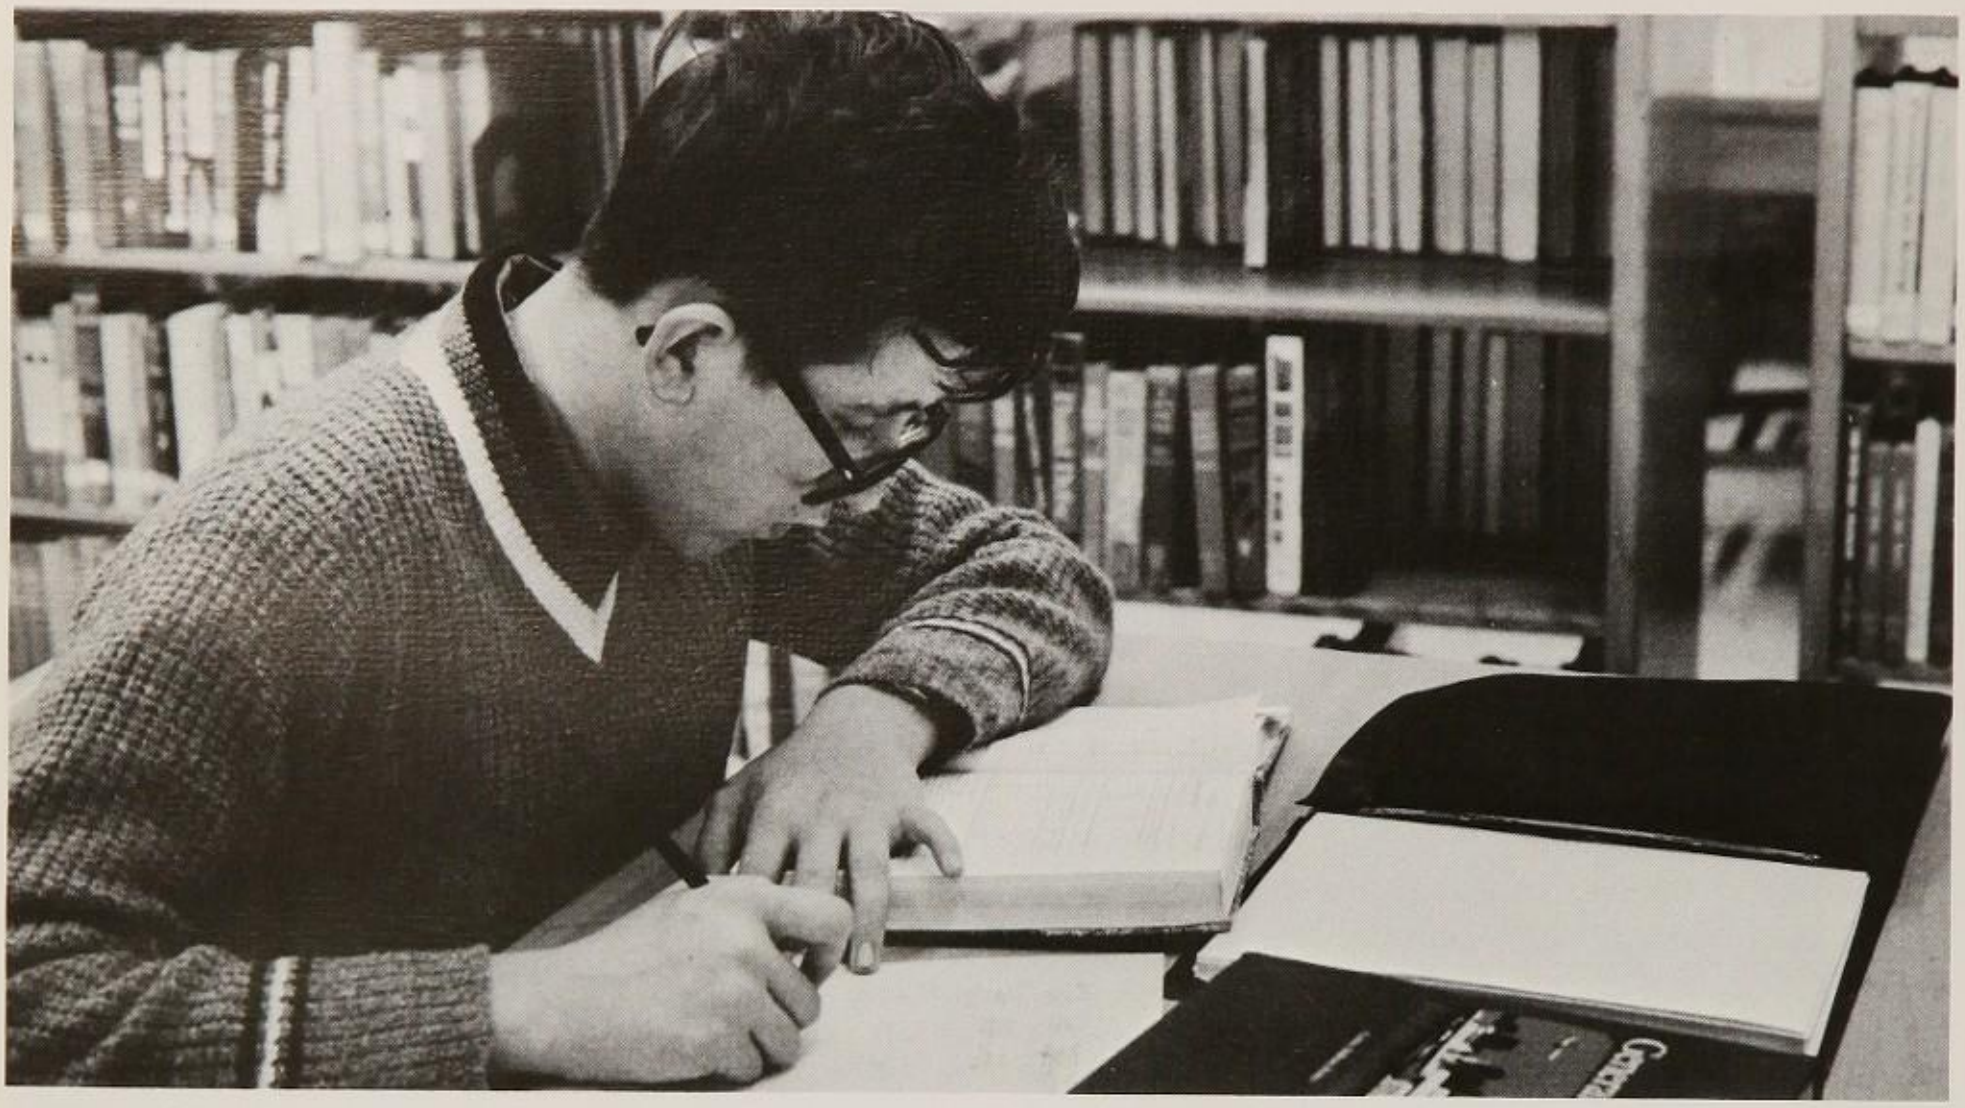
Juggling binomials and constructing parabolas were mental gymnastics performed by math students. In algebra, minds were exercised in quadratics, sets, and sequences. "Twentieth century Euclids" blasted off with figures on a plane and space, while in trig., they stayed on the ground with solid geometry and plane trigonometry. Those in elementary math analysis were introduced to a collage of analytic geometry, college algebra, and elementary calculus. Adept seniors continued probing the structure of the number system in college algebra.



What's so interesting under the microscope? A curious biology student discovers.

Mark Goodwin works diligently to complete a geometry problem.

Students Prepare to Meet Realm



The fog of the business world begins to lift as its cycles become more coherent to a business student.

Ledgers accumulate with figures as a student exercises her skills in bookkeeping.

Effects of the computer age invade High Point's business classes.

of Business

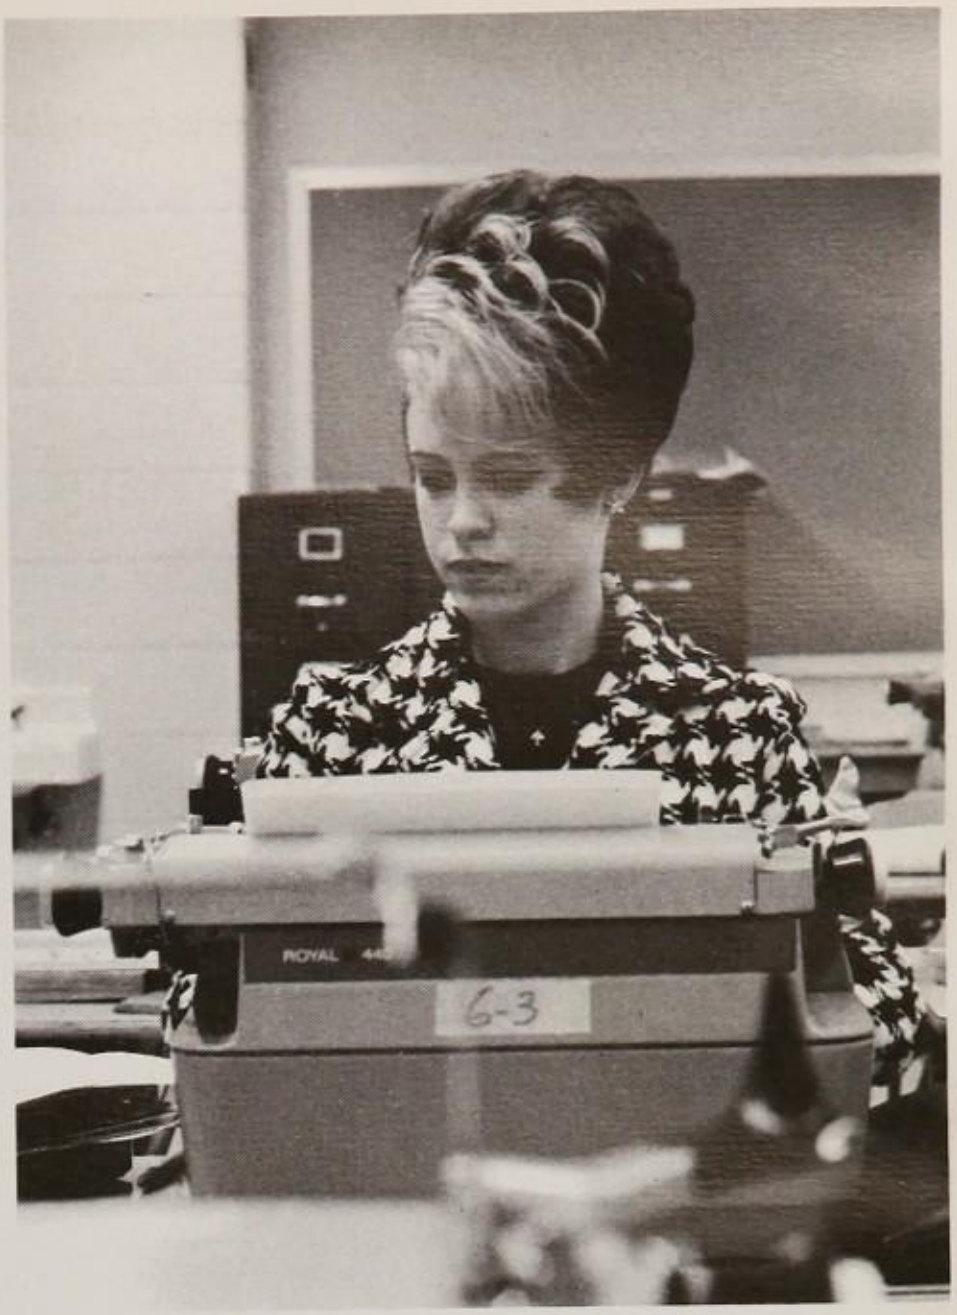
Typewriters clanged, calculating machines clicked, and data processing machines churned during another day in business education classes.

With myriads of courses to choose from including the newest, data processing, would-be professionals learn to take their places in the business world. Inclinations of success are seen in the students taking typing, clerical practice, and shorthand, while those enrolled in business arithmetic and bookkeeping acquire expertise in the art of business procedures.

To obtain a more completed understanding of their free enterprise system, students must tune in to secretarial practice, business organization and salesmanship, business law, and business economics.

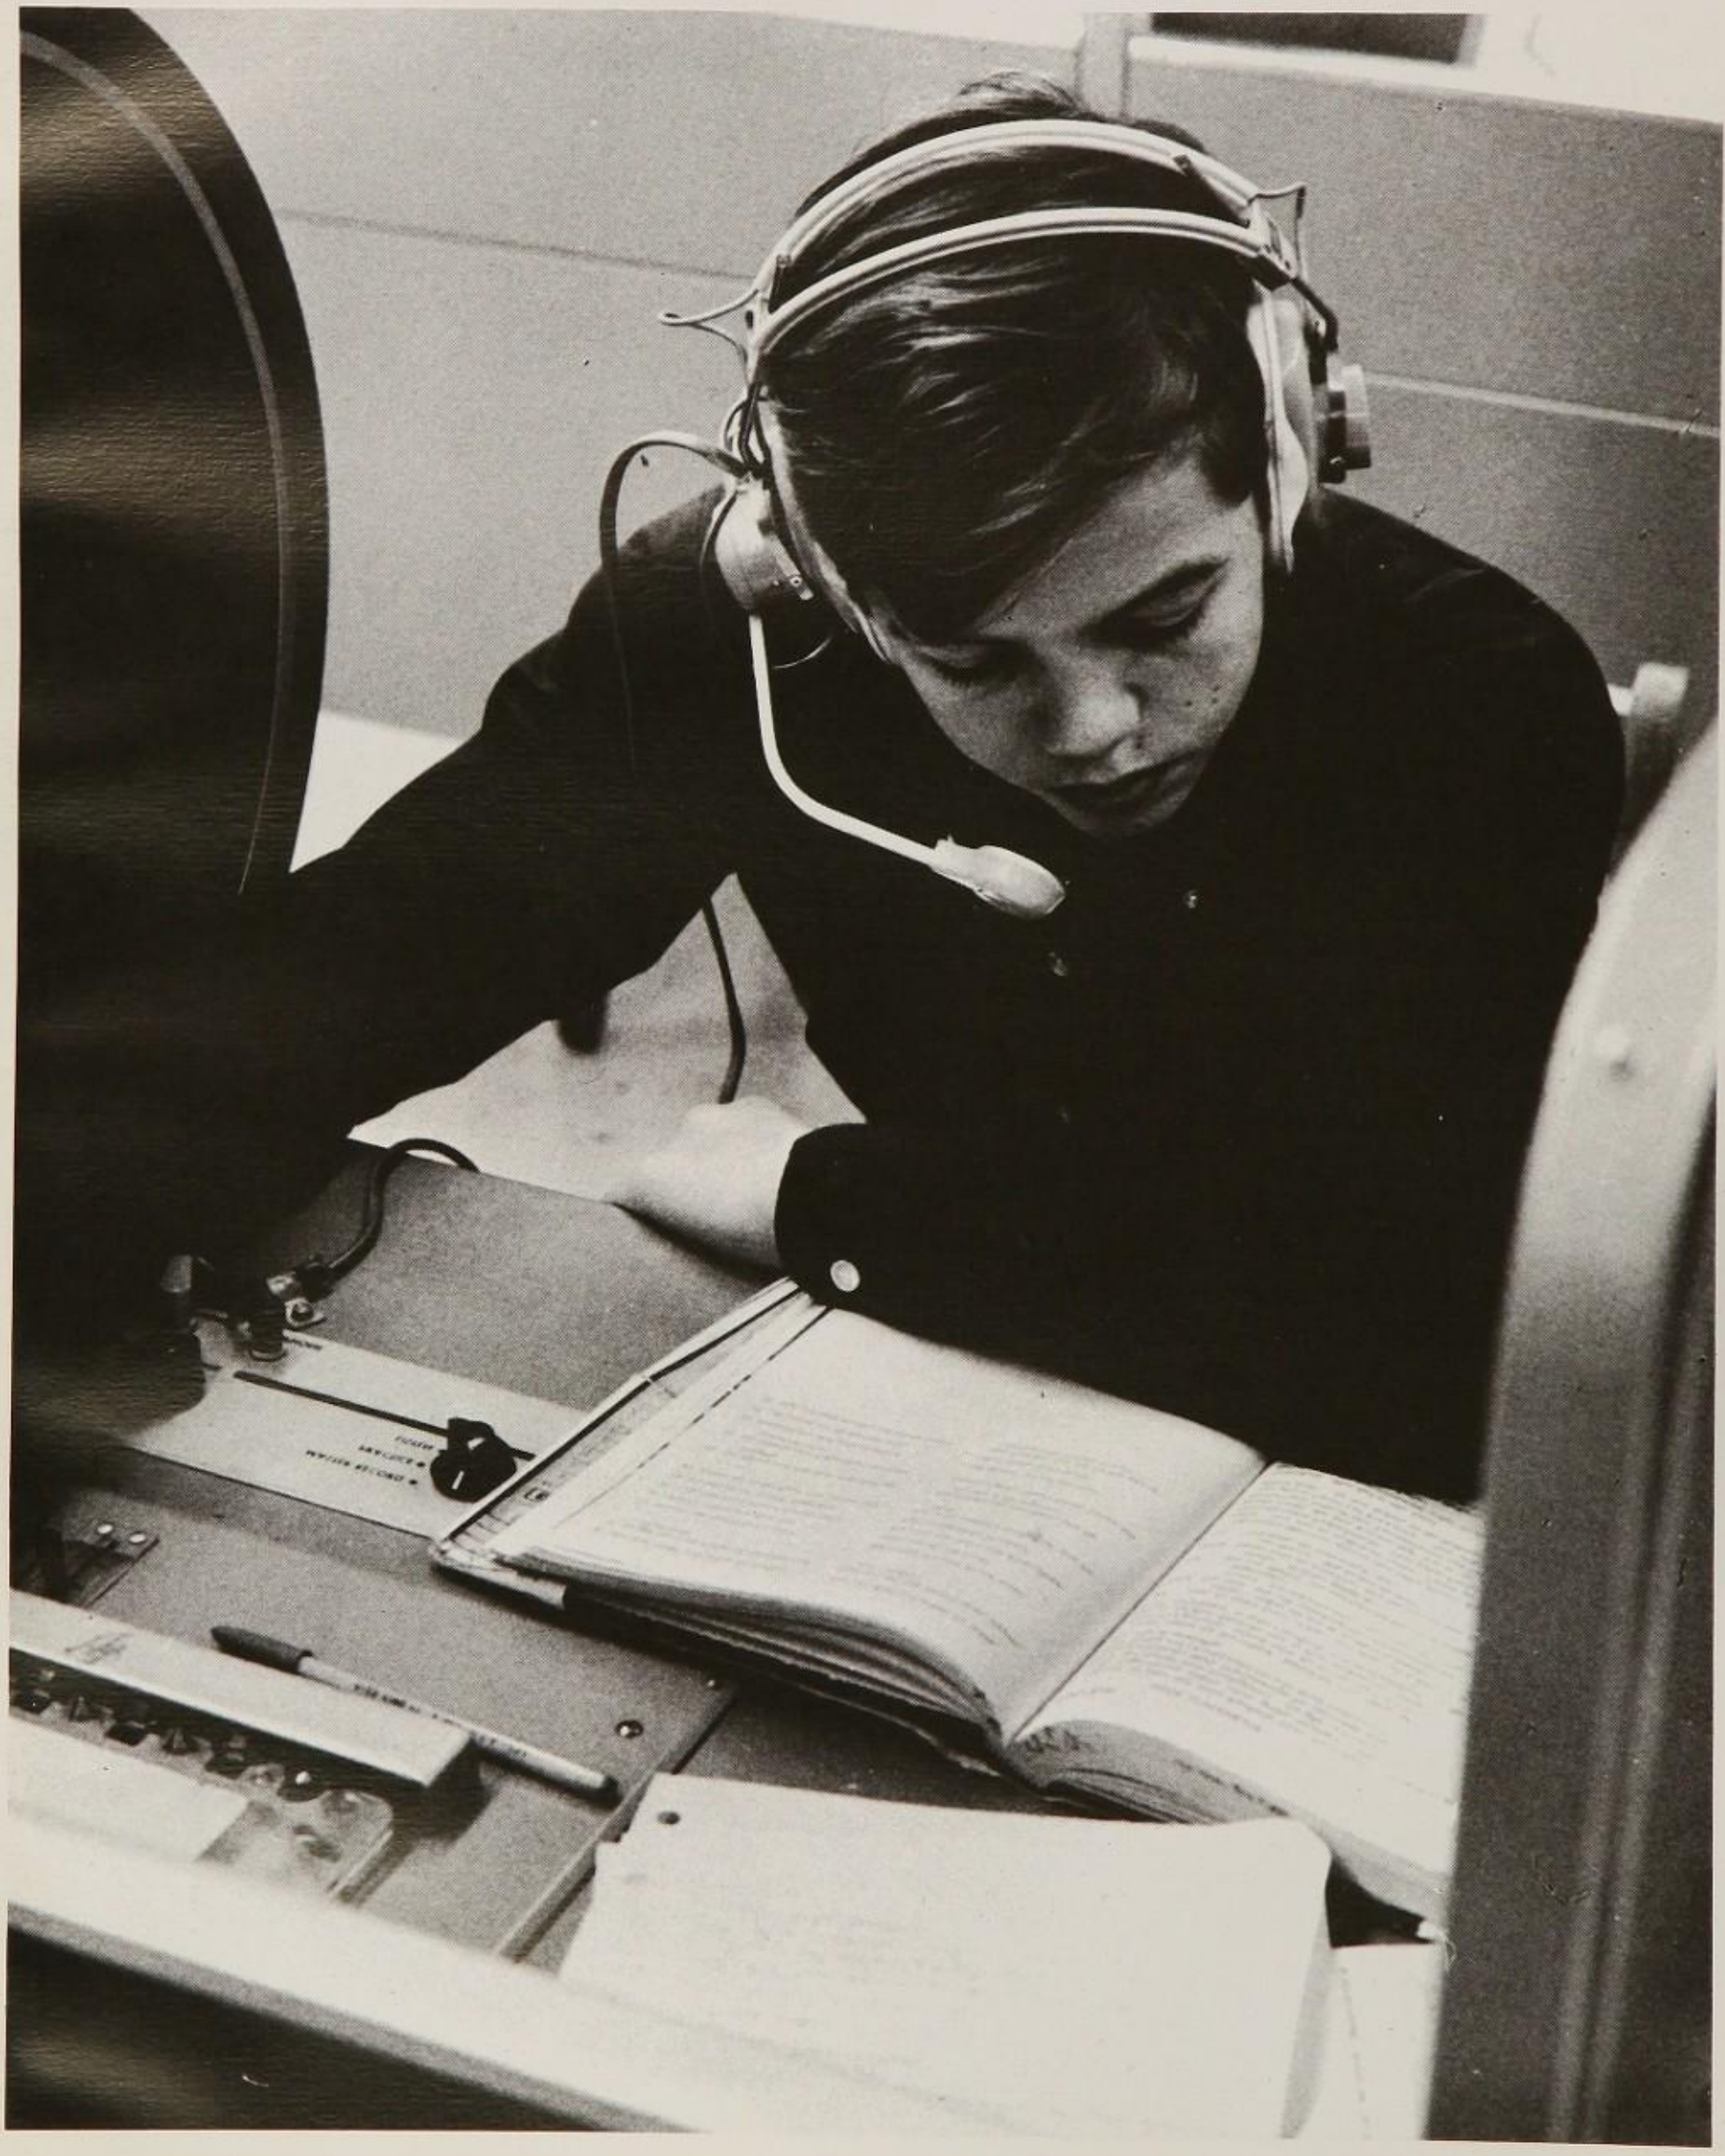


Business executives are waiting for Ann Hayden as she types her way into the business world.

Letters and term papers are the futures of many of the students in the personal typing class.

Languages Provide Entrance into

After the shock of really hearing onself for the first time, a language student strives to make marked improvements in foreign diction.



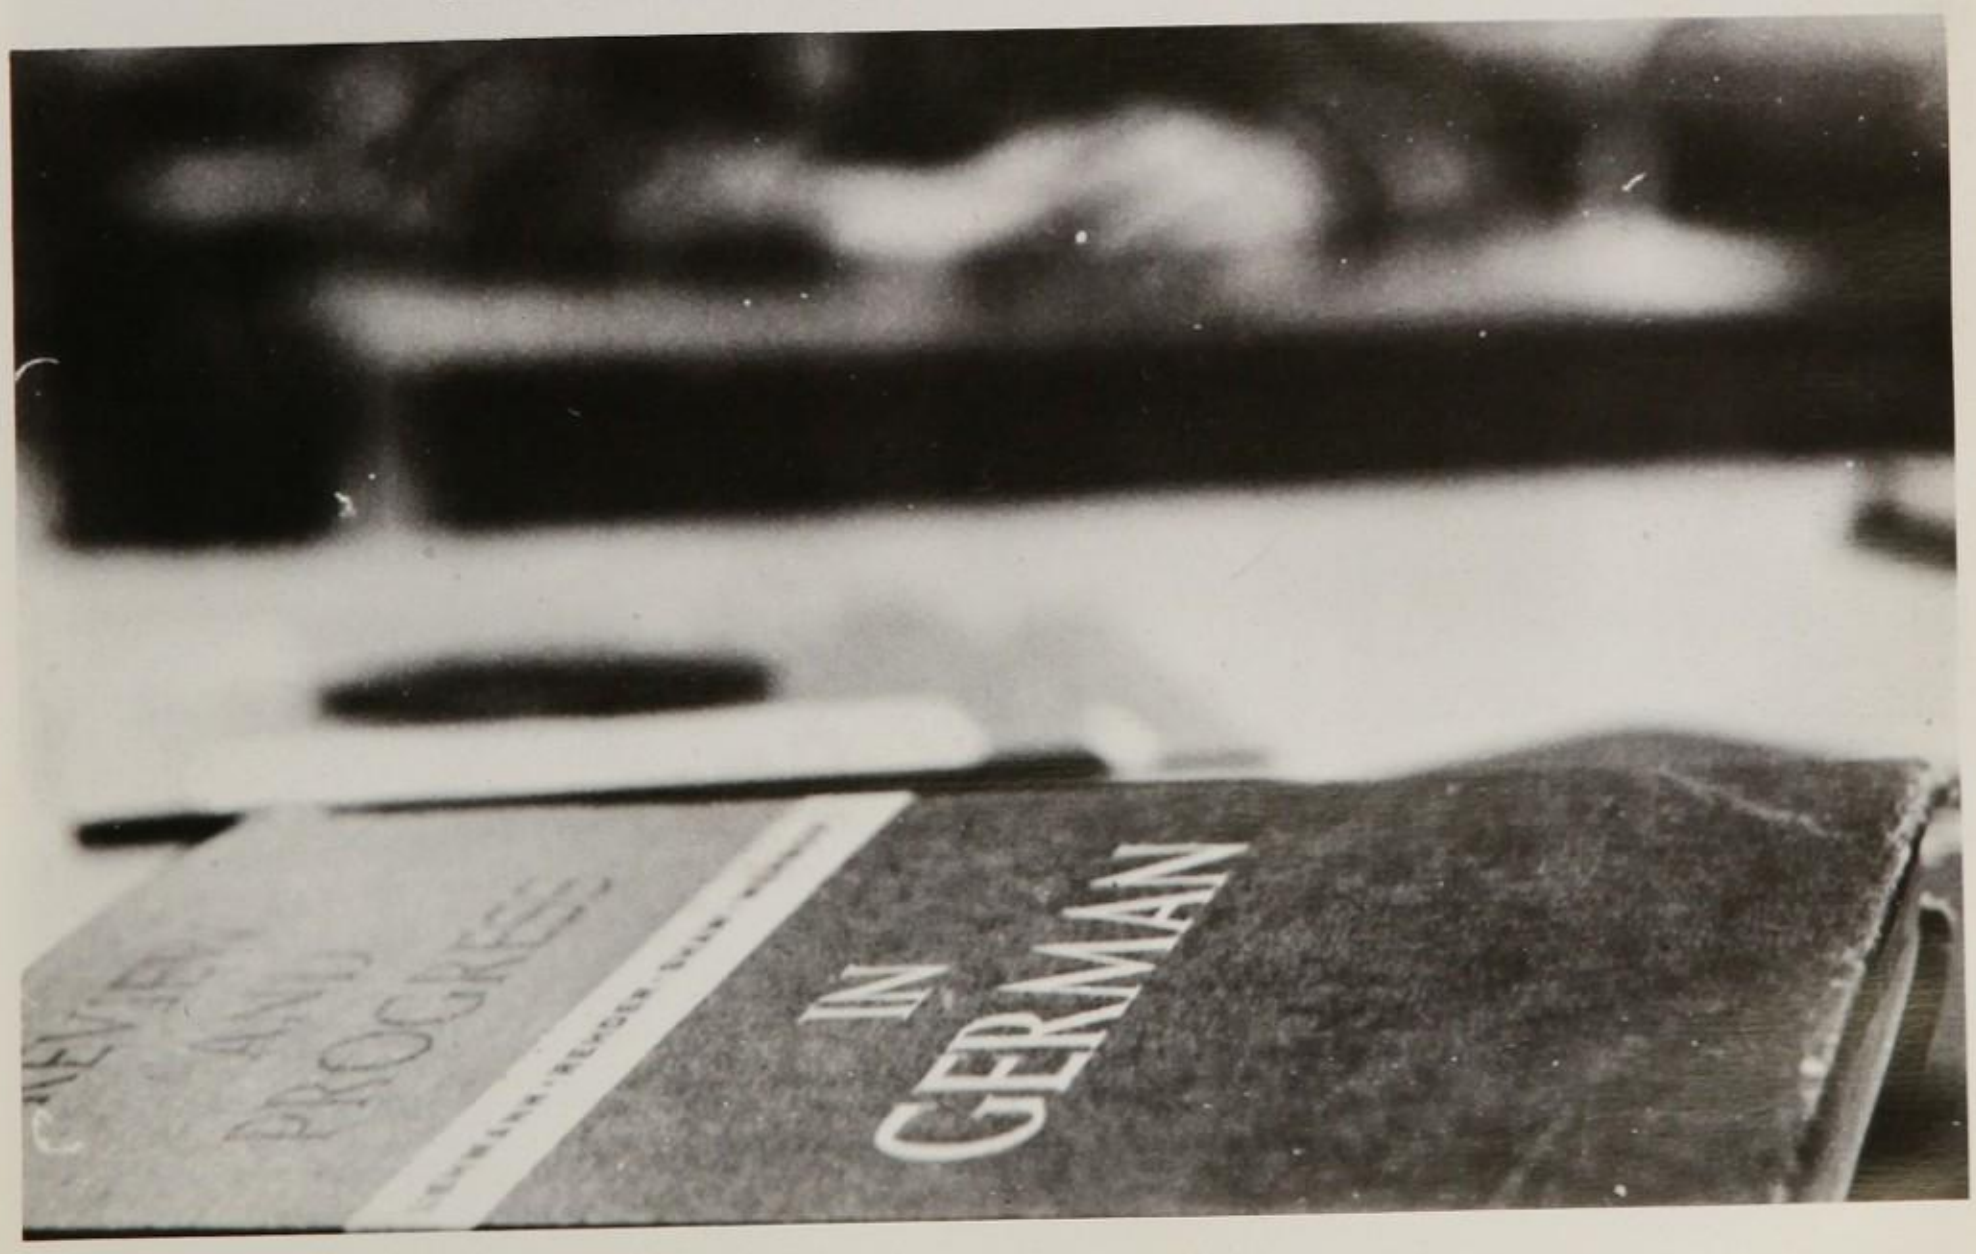
Other Cultures

Another booth short circuited, the endless tapes wore on and on, and frustrated students stuttered into the microphones. The language classes were in action.

At first pupils took beginner's courses in French, Spanish, German, Russian, or Latin, reading primer stories, continually being drilled in grammar, and attempting to utter authentic accents. When teachers said, "Think in the language," students wondered if they would ever be able to even write or speak it.

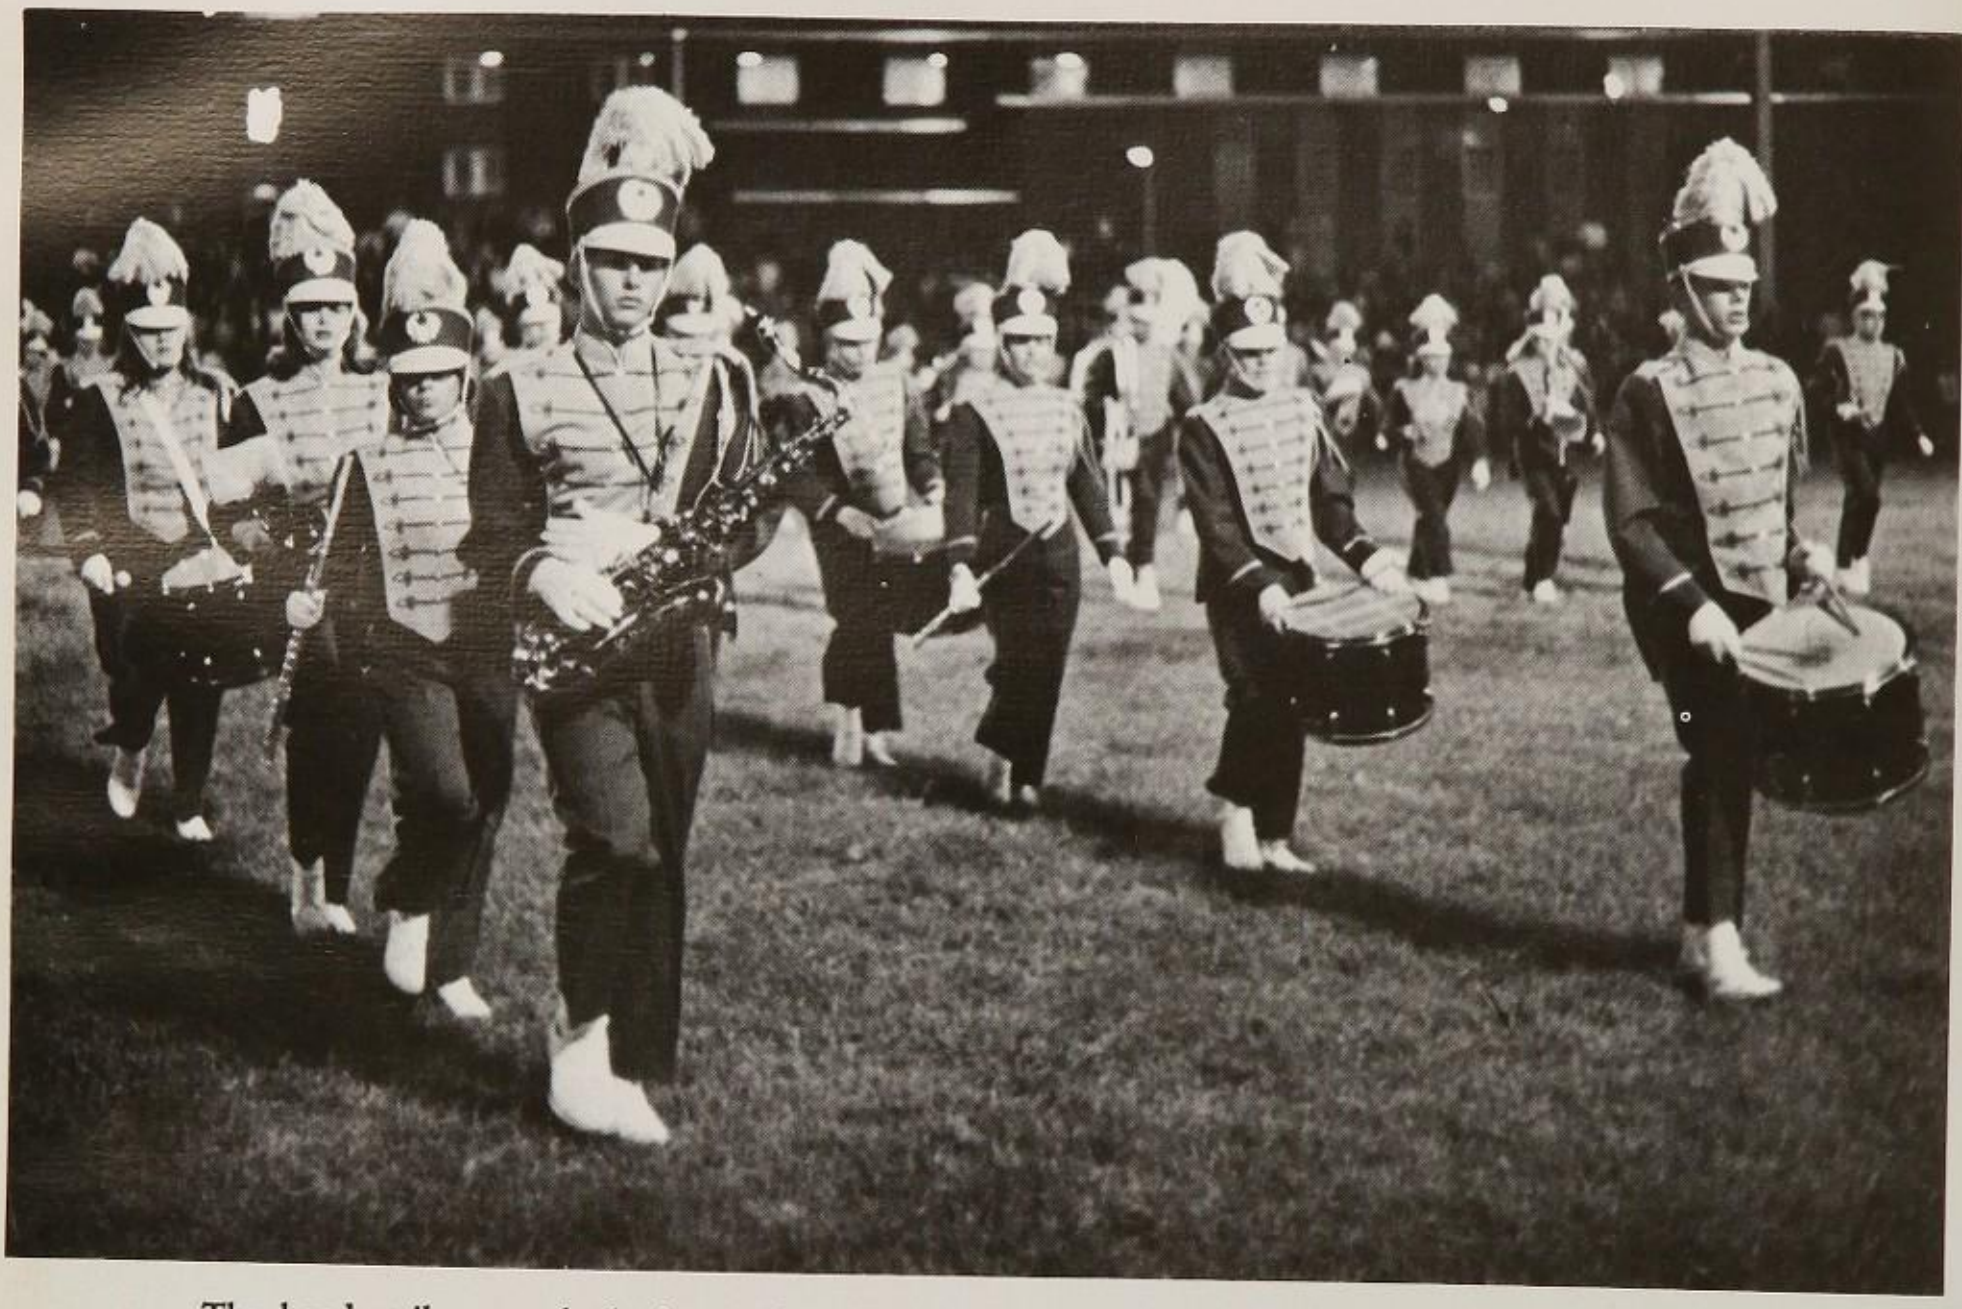
Constant drilling, monotonous tapes and surprise dictations continued. Soon the accents grew less ludicrous and the literature less primitive and language scholars began to unwind their thoughts that swung into compositions. As they investigated the cultural background of the language, the multilinguists scored a more intimate understanding of the countries and their inhabitants.

Language students perfect their accents with practice drills.



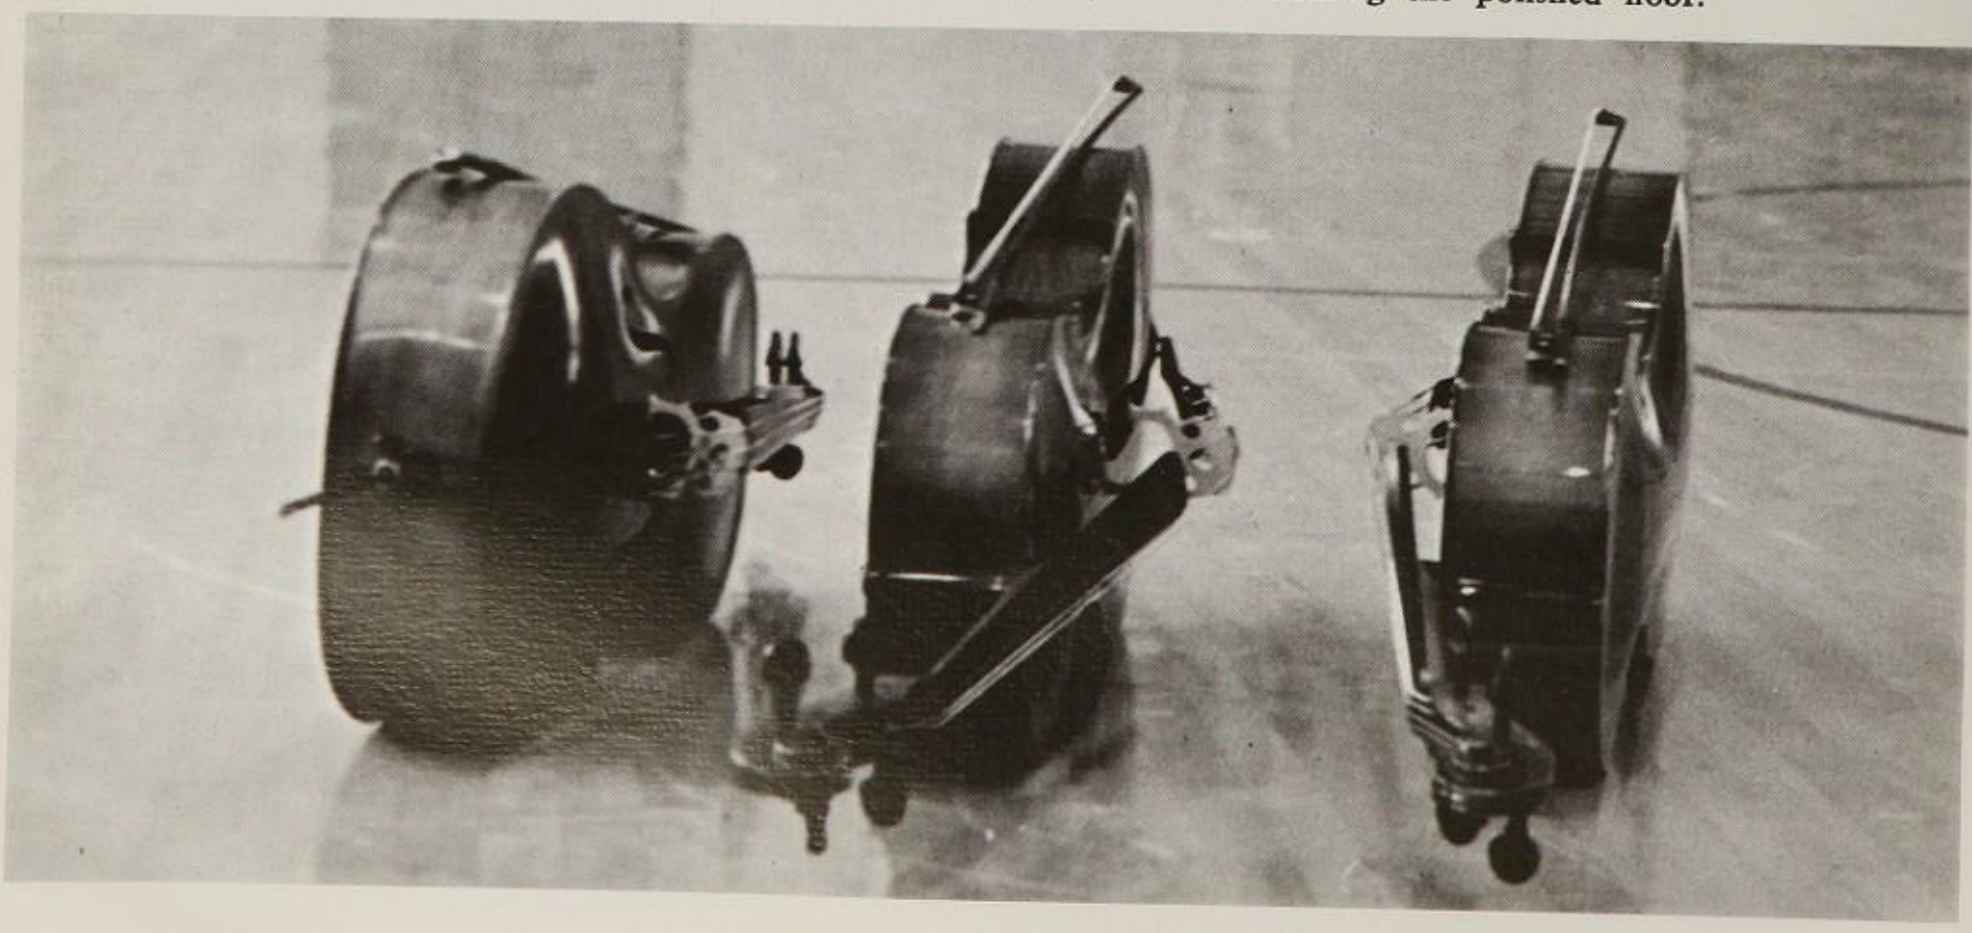
The door to an enriching culture opens through a German text.

Instruments, Voices Resound with



The band strikes up rhythmic sounds and steps to match, all lending spirit to a night game.

A lone trio of cellos wait their turn, their echoing shadows striking the polished floor.



Melodious Tones

Ringing voices, instrumental chords and crashing cymbals contributed to the '68 sound of music. Rehearsing regularly, the singers and musicians prepared to please the audience's musical palate.

Although the never-ending practices and sectionals might have given some an earache rather than an earful, the musicians continued to create musical montages.

Chorus students first learned the fundamentals of musical performance, and later gave High Pointers examples of their talents. The Concert Choir, sometimes joined by the chorus, sang in tantalizing tones.

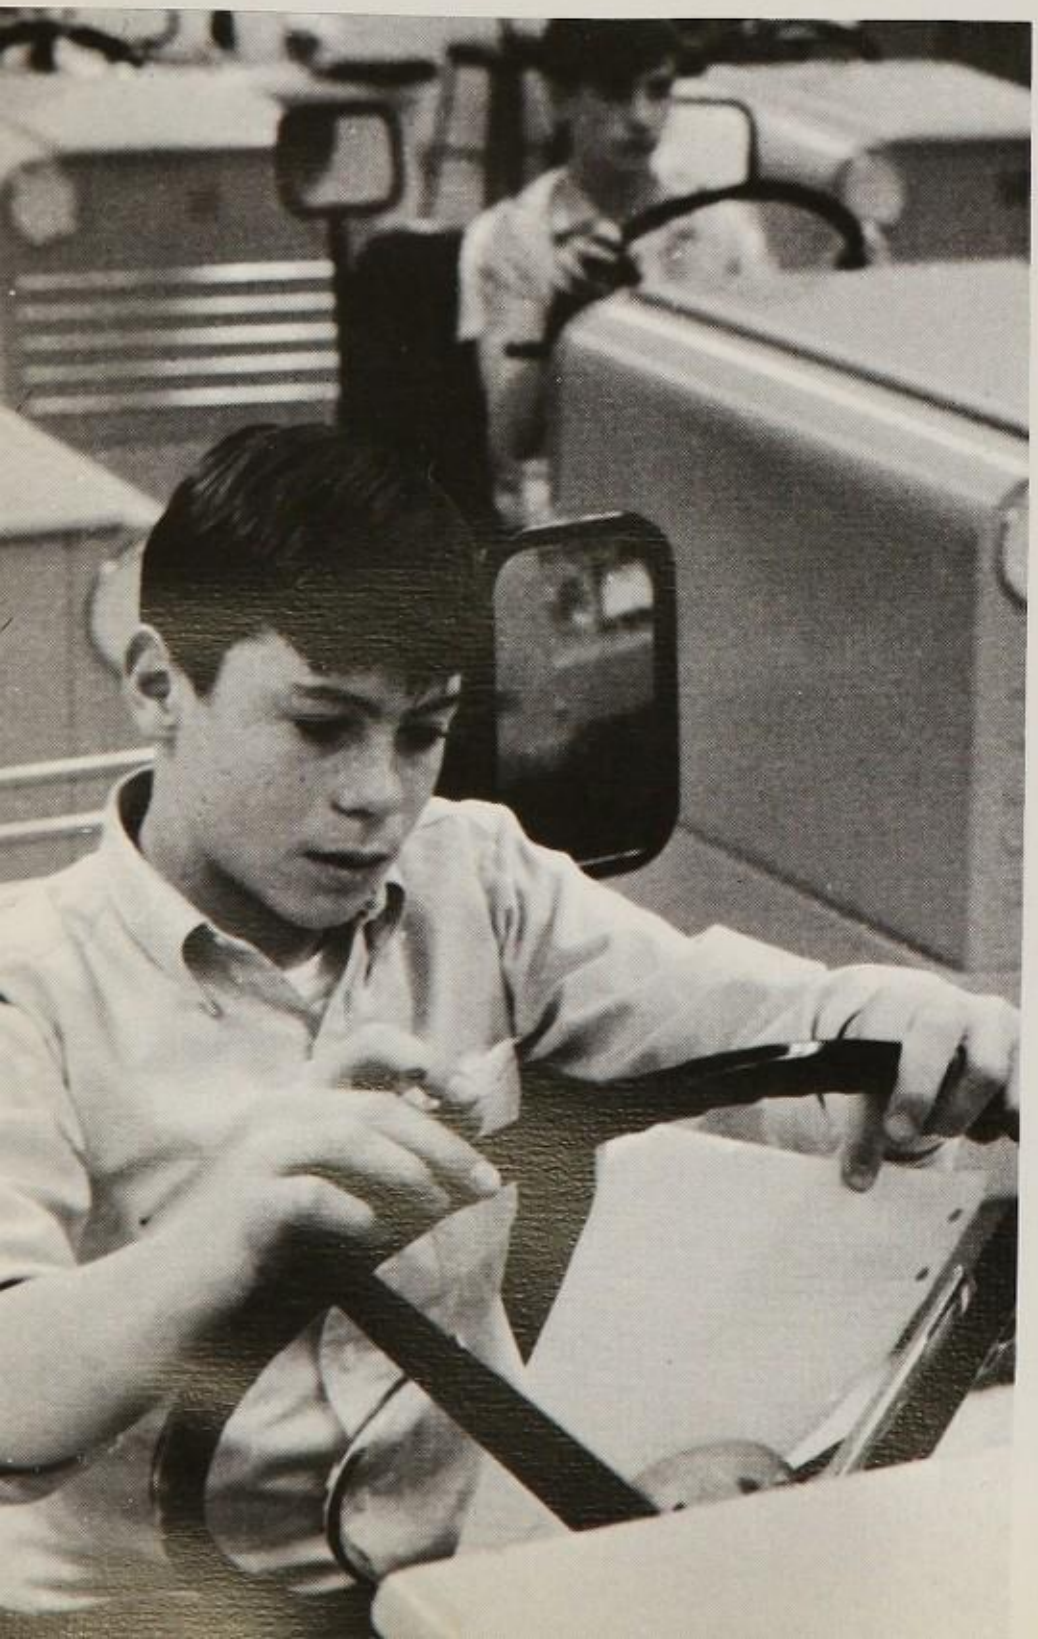
Musicians presented rhythm and harmony in a variety of ways. The maching band could be seen thumping out a swinging beat at a game, while the symphonic band appeared at school and public concerts. Members of the orchestra fiddled, plucked, and strummed on their instruments of strings and wood.

Voices blend in Concert Choir as melodies come alive.

Bob Orent makes a little air go a long way in his contrabass clarinet.

Psychedelic sinews merge as the action kaleidoscopes on the volleyball court.

A quick review of notes helps Scott Alexander to overcome difficulties of starting his simulated car.



Varied P.E. Program Increases Co-ordination

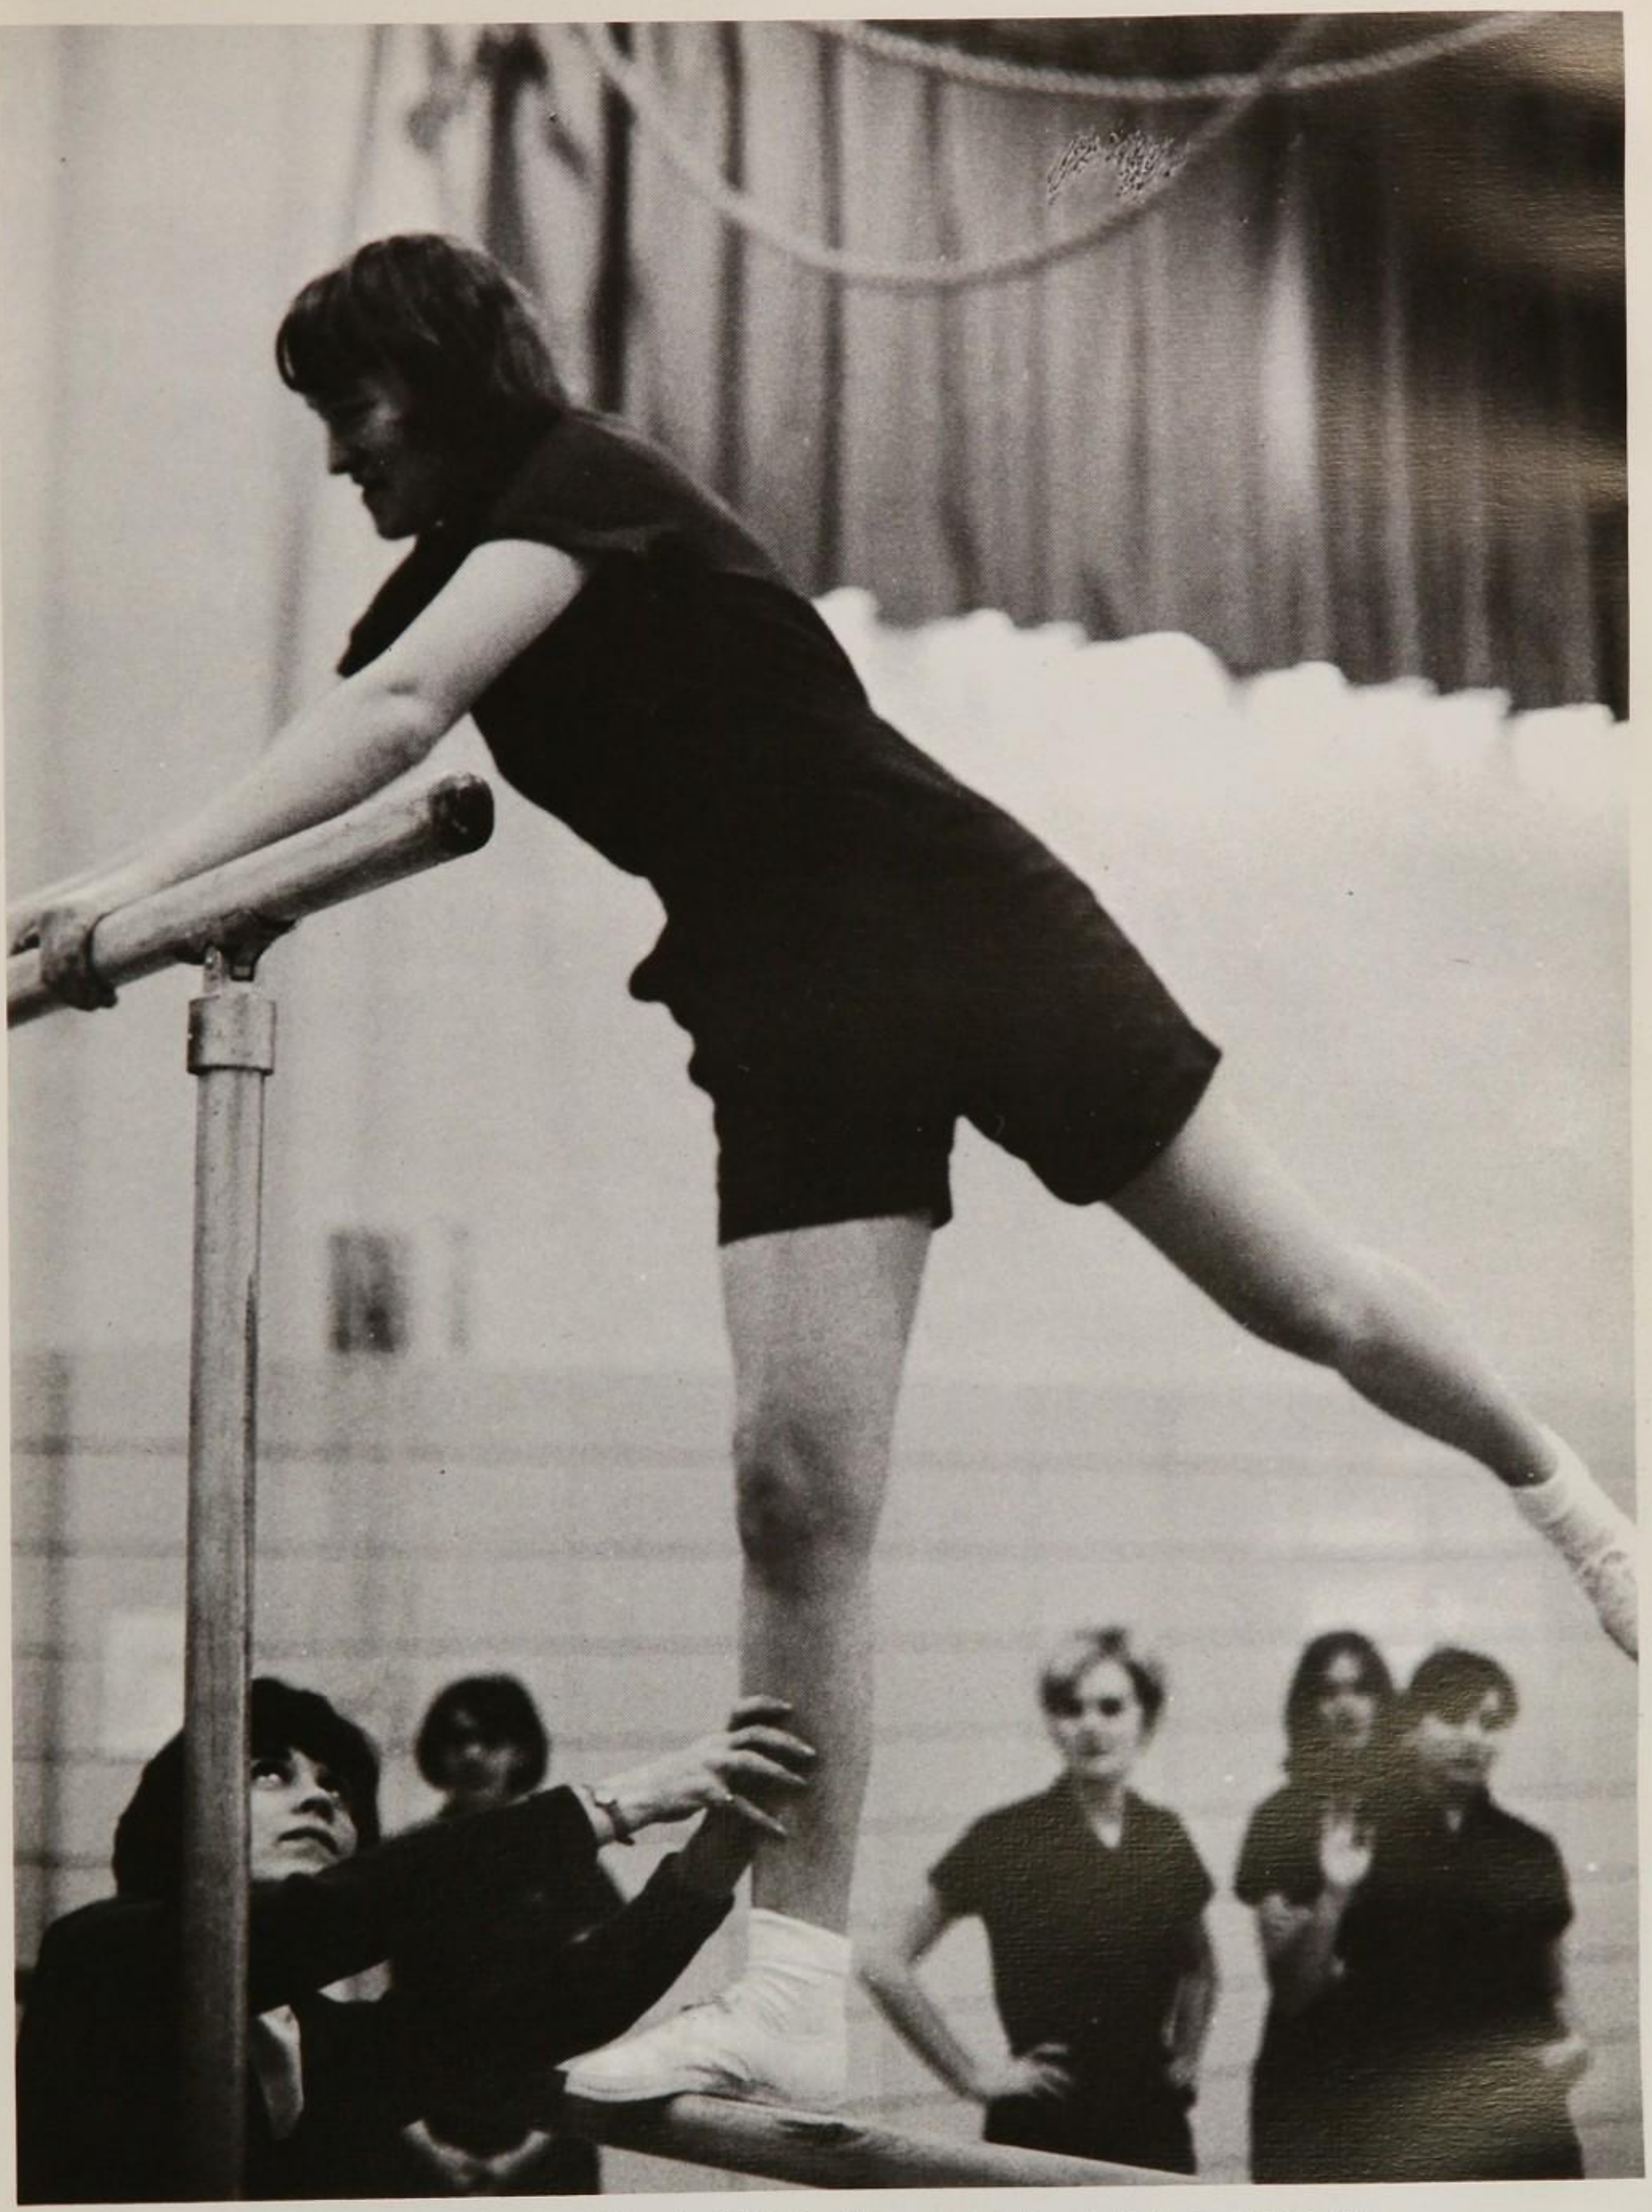
"No, Virginia, you don't feed the horse, you jump over it." Not all students begin their physical education course quite as ignorant as Virginia, but they soon learn its variety and importance.

Many participating received a shock, when they entered what appeared to be a Medieval torture chamber and realized it was really a gym set up for healthful purposes. Their exploration led to discoveries that such things as the Swedish box, parallel bars, and ropes were only gymnastic equipment. There were swingers, who swirled through the air on the trampoline or ropes, only to come in for a near crash landing.

Amidst volleyball, speedball, and exercises, the driver education classes knocked over a few poles in an effort to learn safe driving.

The male participants could often be seen panting while racing around the school or the track or exerting effort while practicing touch football, golf, and wrestling.

Girls entered into such games as soccer, field hockey, softball, and badminton to chalk up one more year of physical fitness.



The importance of precision is skillfully demonstrated by students in gymnastics.

Creative Abilities Encouraged in

Art Classes

In art classes, talented teens expressed their creativity with their hands as well as their minds. Creations of paper-maché horses, abstract collages, and tables covered with blobs of color was the setting displayed in the H. P. art coves.

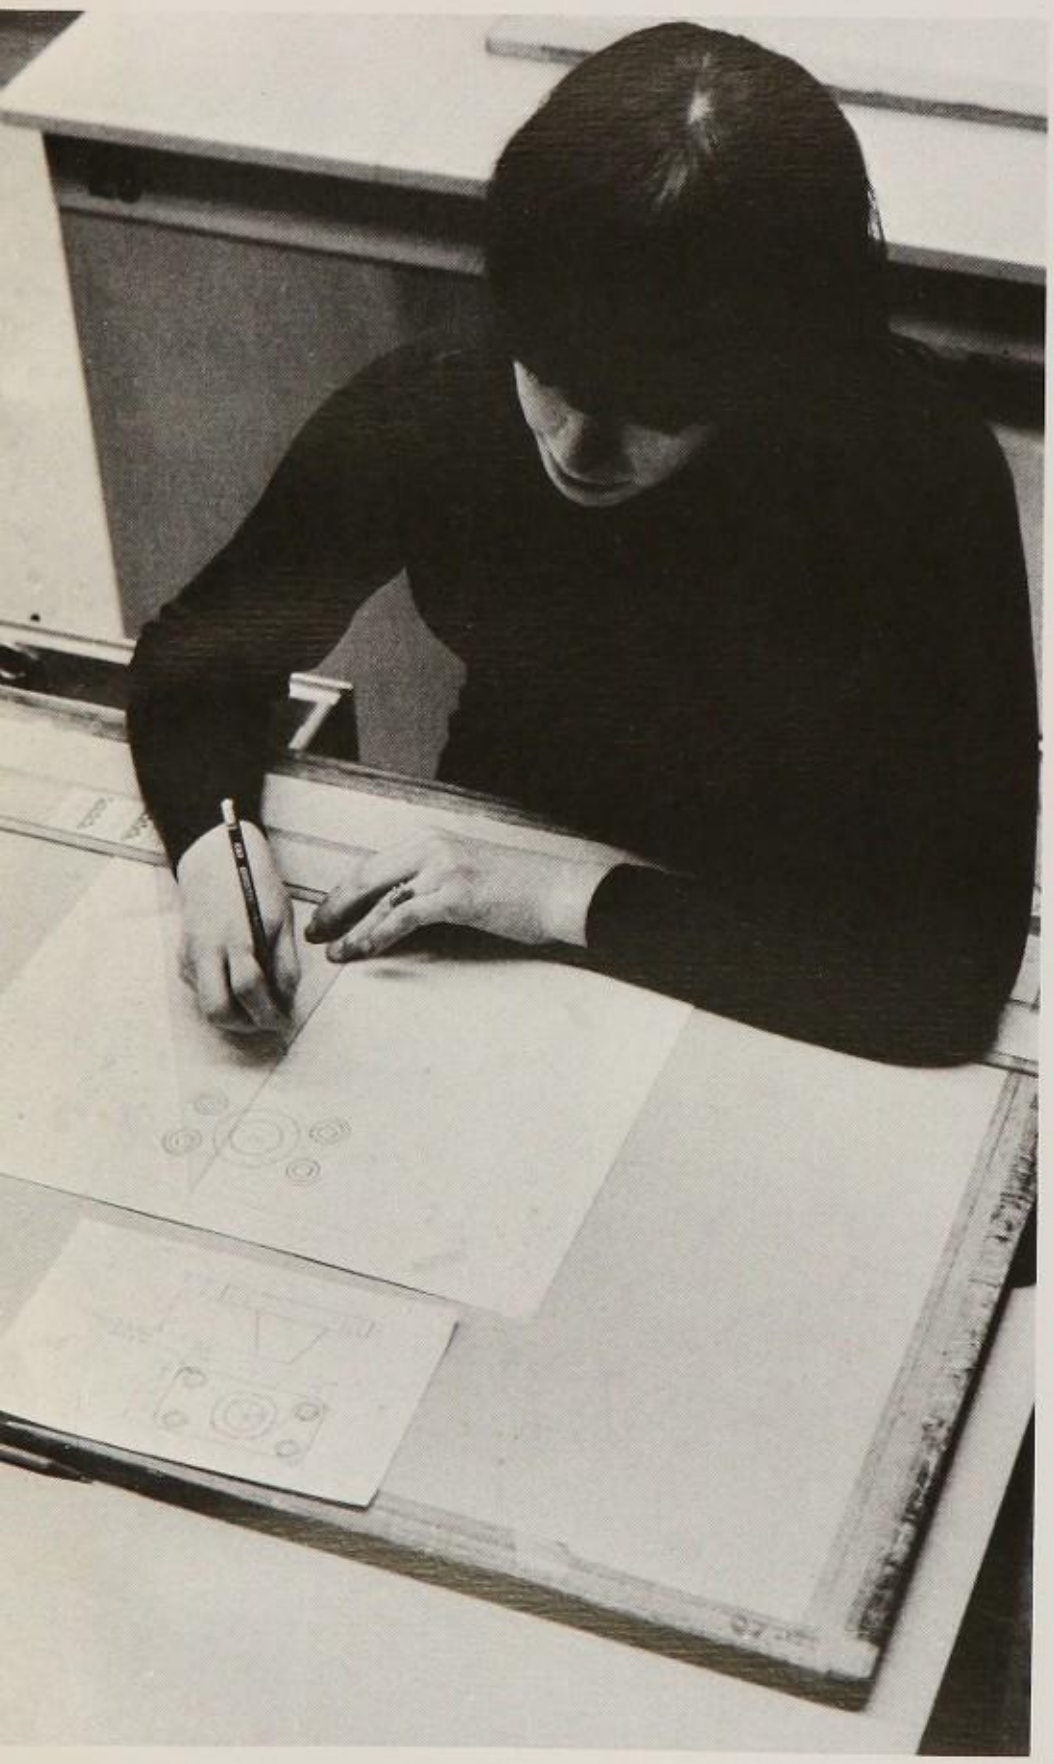
Basic types of arts and crafts were introduced to Art II progressive painters as they also scanned the history of art. Compounding the techniques learned previously, third year "Picassos" probed the principles of design and planned individual projects. Ascetic seniors, in their last year of art exploration, were given a chance to perfect their skills as they unleashed their creativity in oil painting, water color, three-dimnesional design, ceramics, and printing methods.

Adding final touches, Lynn Phippen strives to perfect a pen and ink drawing.

In art, Marsha Sykes has learned to express her feelings with a brush, as is proven by her final work.

Window shoppers . . .

Mechanical drawing requires accuracy and precision.



Home Ec, Shop Provide

Skipping from meals to interior decorating to clothing, the home ec. classes learned the domestic arts. By supplementing practice with studies, the girls joined the in-crowd of homemakers.

In general clothing, fashion conscious young ladies designed an array of garments, while the girls in general foods planned and examined the science of nutrition.

Whether lathing a piece of wood, sketching a landscape, or lubricating an engine, mechanical-minded young men contributed to the hum of activity in the industrial arts rooms. Students kept pace with the modern mechanical practices in shop as they studied anything from carpentry and radio transmissions to nuclear energy and underwater photography.

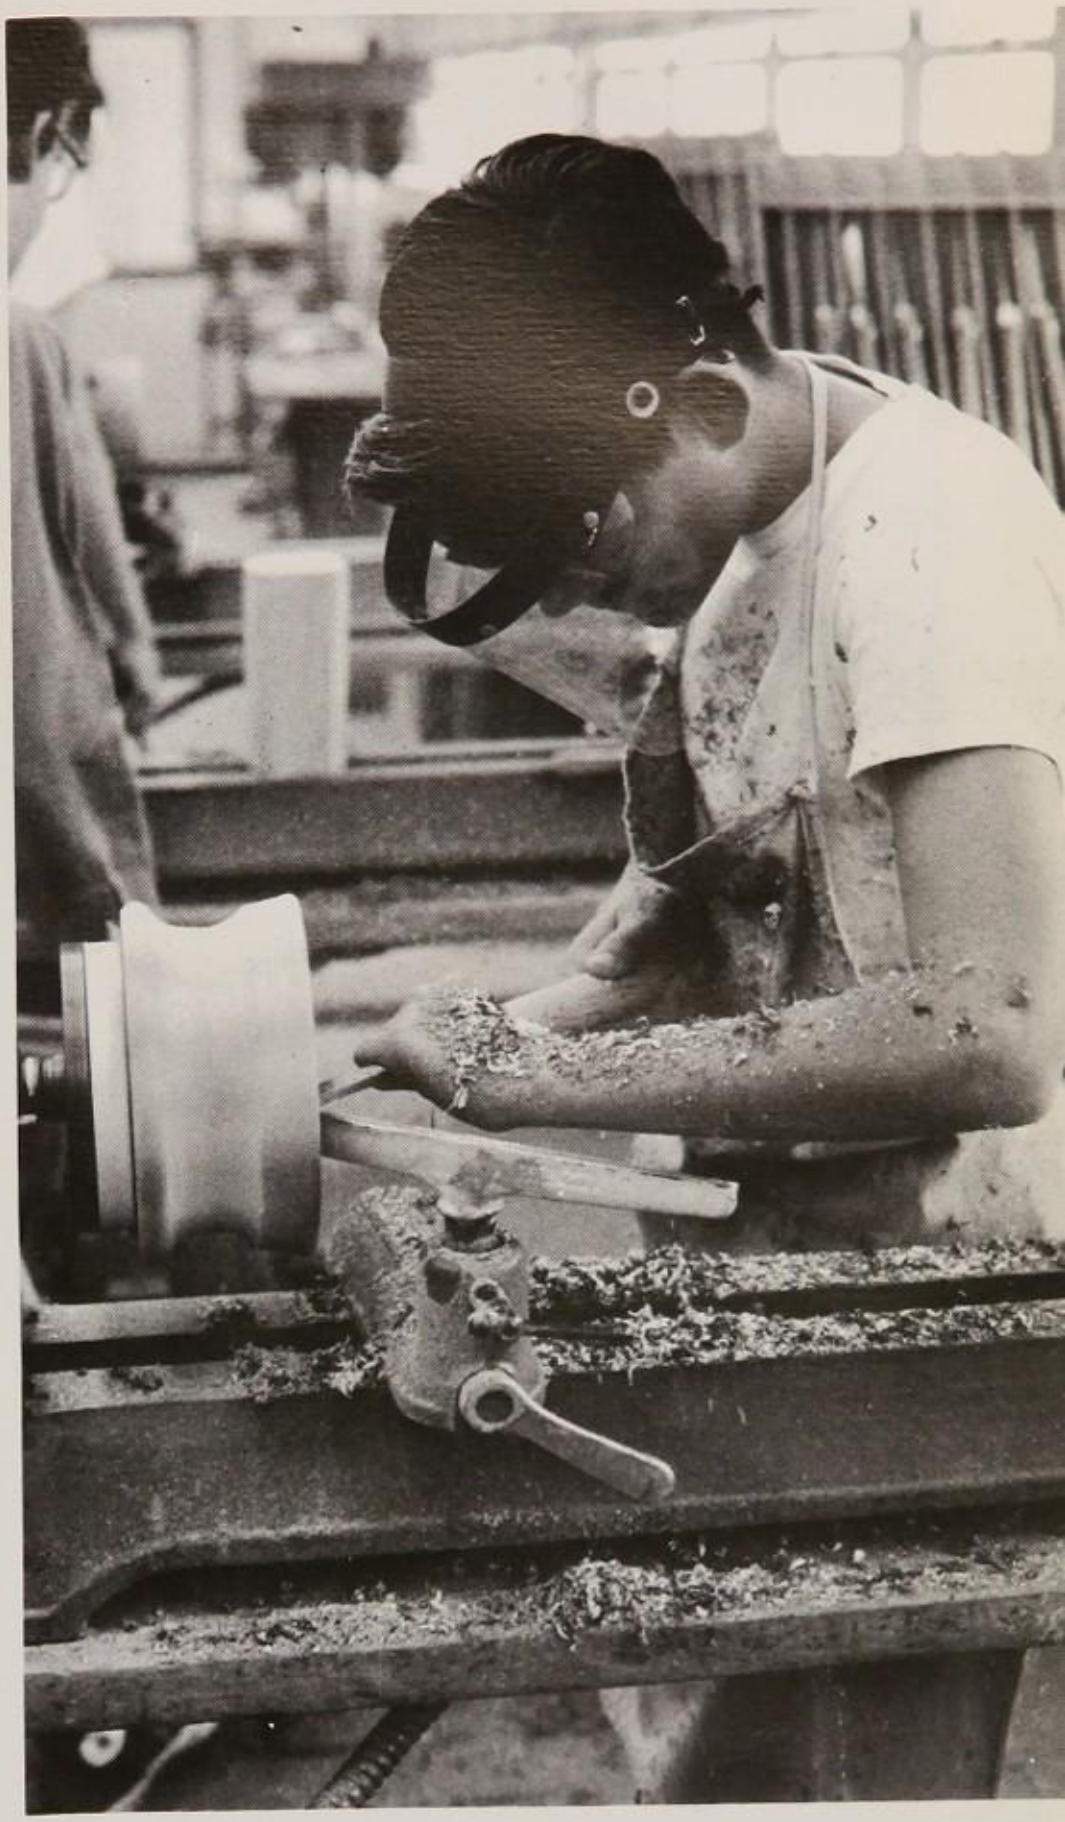
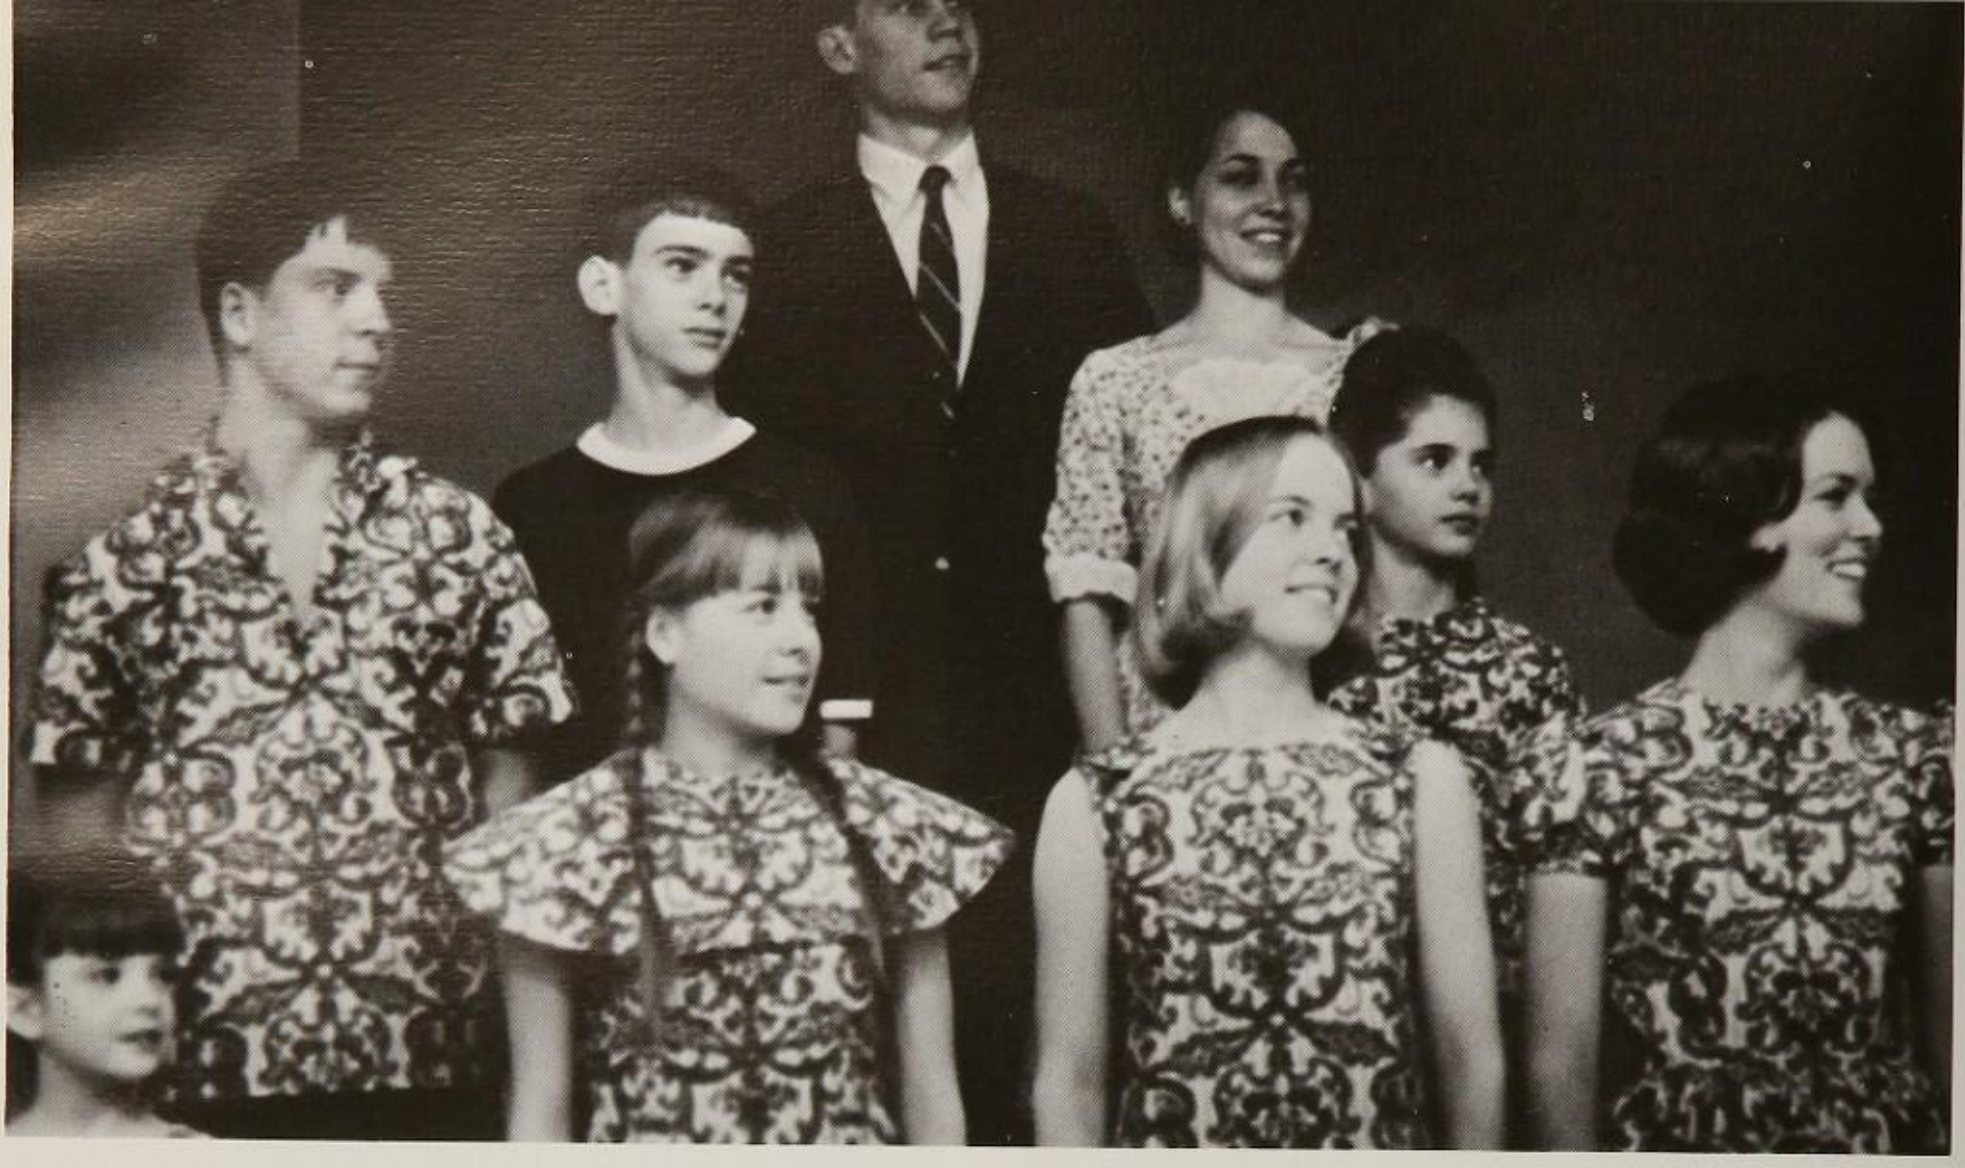
for Improvement of Skills

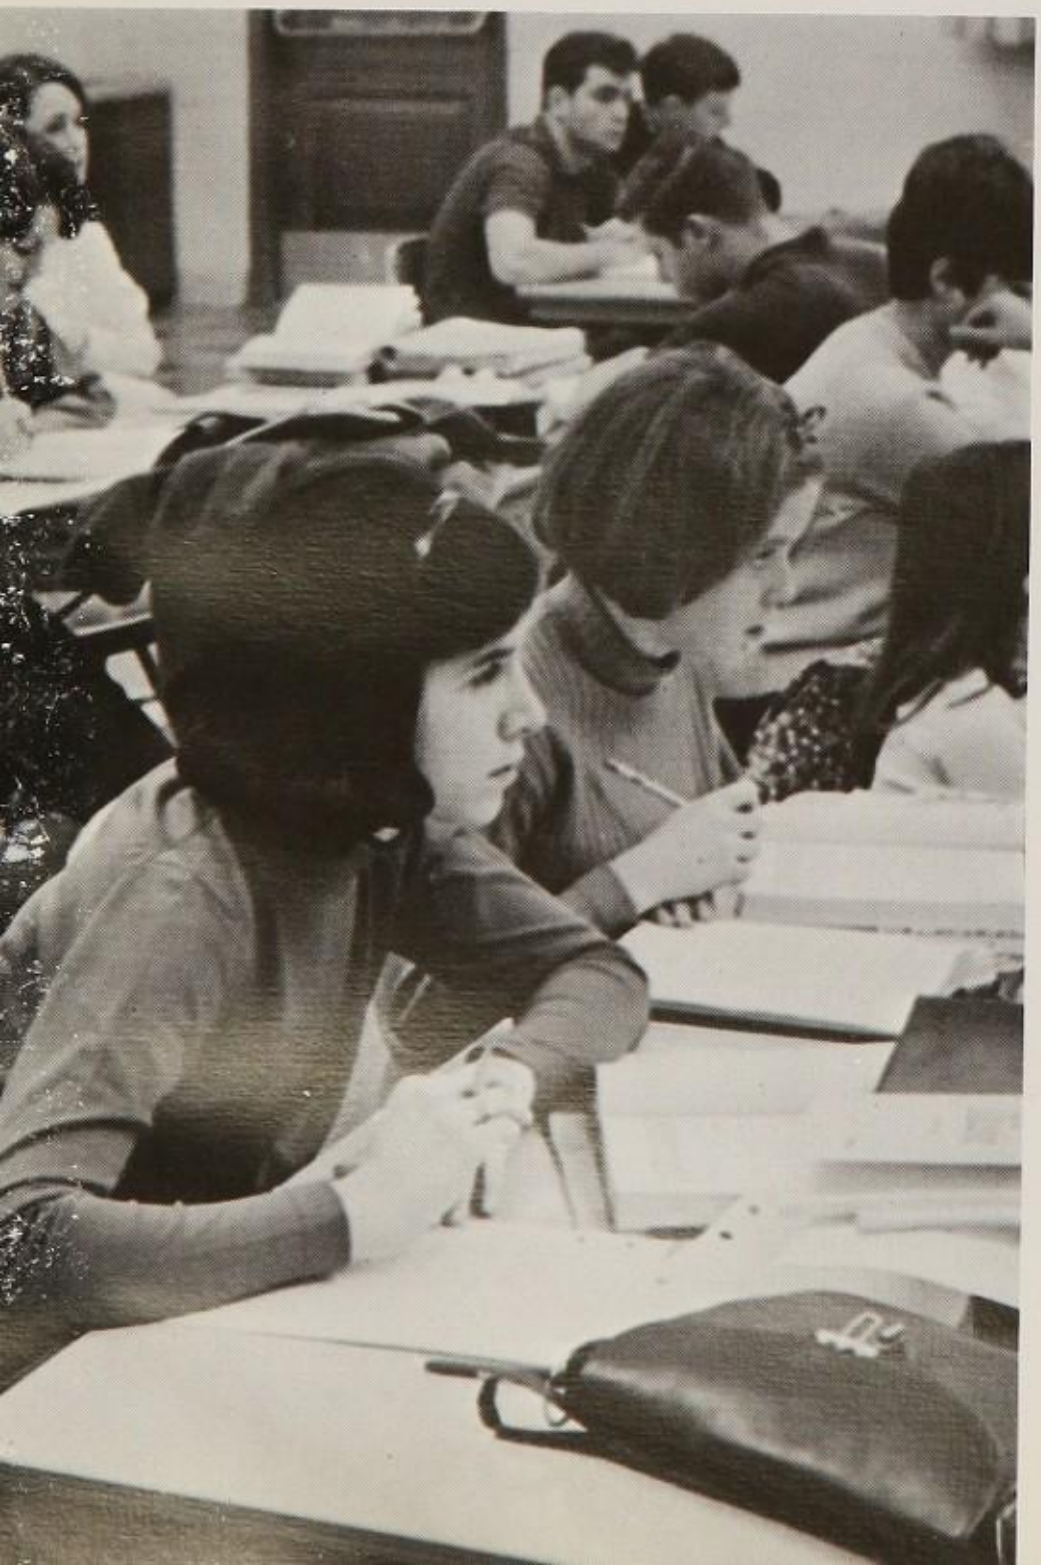
Mechanical expertise is necessary even in sewing.



The dedicated carpenter never stops until the job is done.



Through their study in drama, students learn how to present plays.



Students listen intently to Mr. Anzalone's lecture on modern playwrights.

Drama Students Learn that 'All the World's a Stage'

Chewing their lips and knocking their knees, dramatics students stood on the flood-lit stage, delivering speeches or conducting spirited debates. These amateur actors and actresses were not on Broadway but on a stage in Room 100. In the Little Theatre, the setting of High Point's presentations, they were studying the exciting realms of theatrics.

While investigating forms of oral expression, speech classes learned how to organize and deliver impromptu and manuscript speeches. They also encountered the challenge of debate and thought provoking oral interpretations of literature.

At various times the stage hosted a Cockney flower girl named Eliza; a vain English queen; a despairing Danish prince; as dramatics students plunged into play producing, acting, and directing, using famous works for practice. Related theater arts, such as make-up and costume, were also included in the program.

To further the understanding of today's drama; the history of the theater from the ancient tragedians to the avant-gardists completed the drama course.

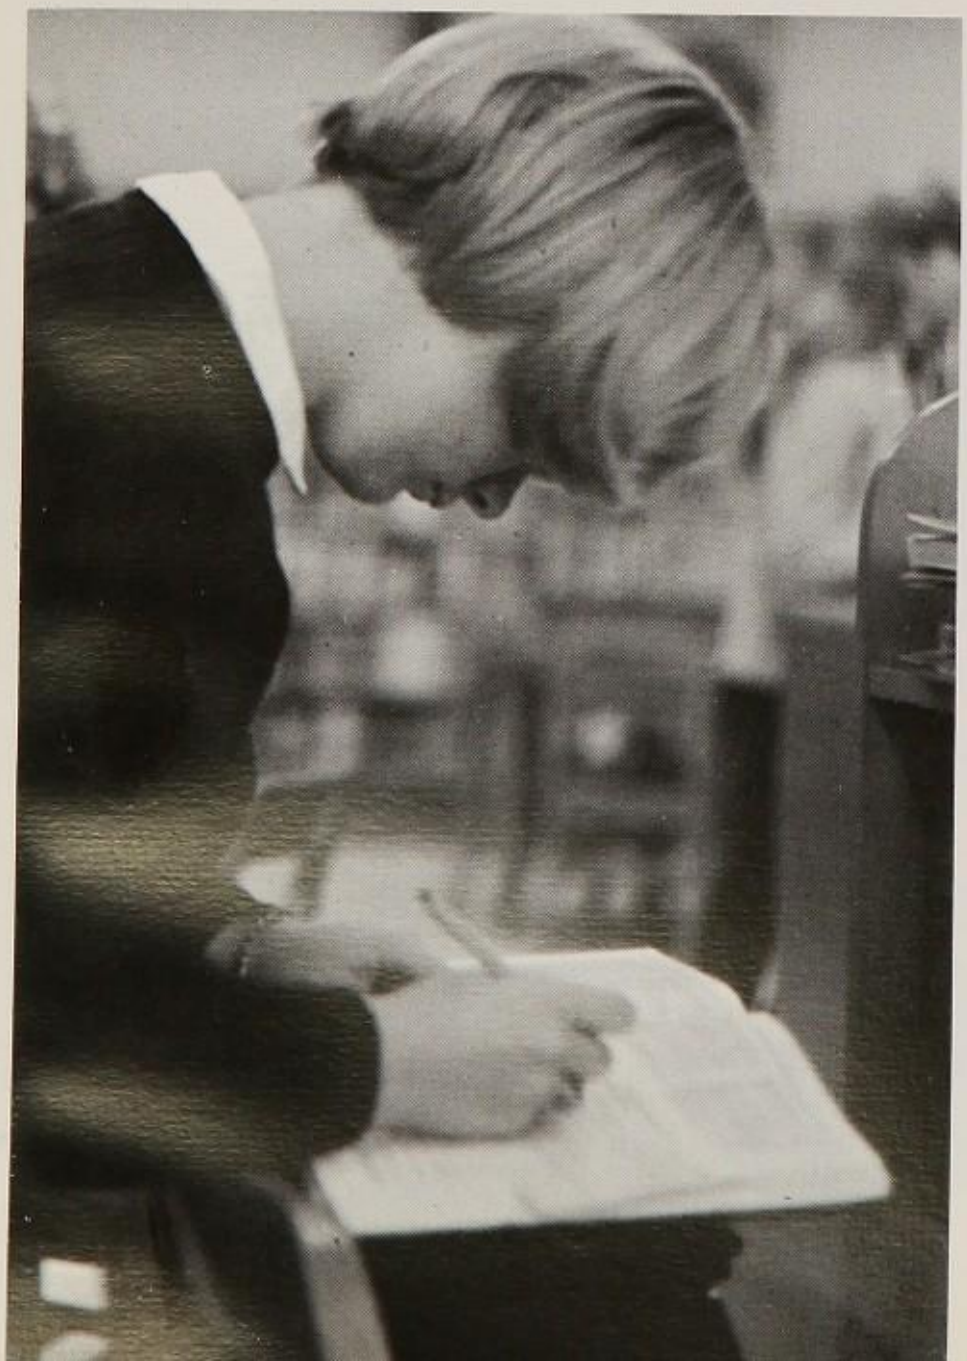
Honor Society Acknowledges Achievements

Member Jeanette Scammon is found working in the library to achieve her goal of good scholarship.



Go into any club meeting on a Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, or Friday. You're bound to find a member of the National Honor Society participating in the happenings. That's why he's a member of the Society.

Scholarship, leadership, character and service are qualities found in each of the members. The National Honor Society is a way of recognizing students who meet the qualifications.

Students strive to achieve their personal goals, and they find honor on their way to success.

Upholding High Point's motto, "By Virtue — Not by Words," they carry the torch high.

Bonnie Frank and David Perkins work to complete Eyry sections with yearbook sponsor Mrs. Spencer.

Honor Society members can be found in the broadcast booth preparing to give Hi-Lites.

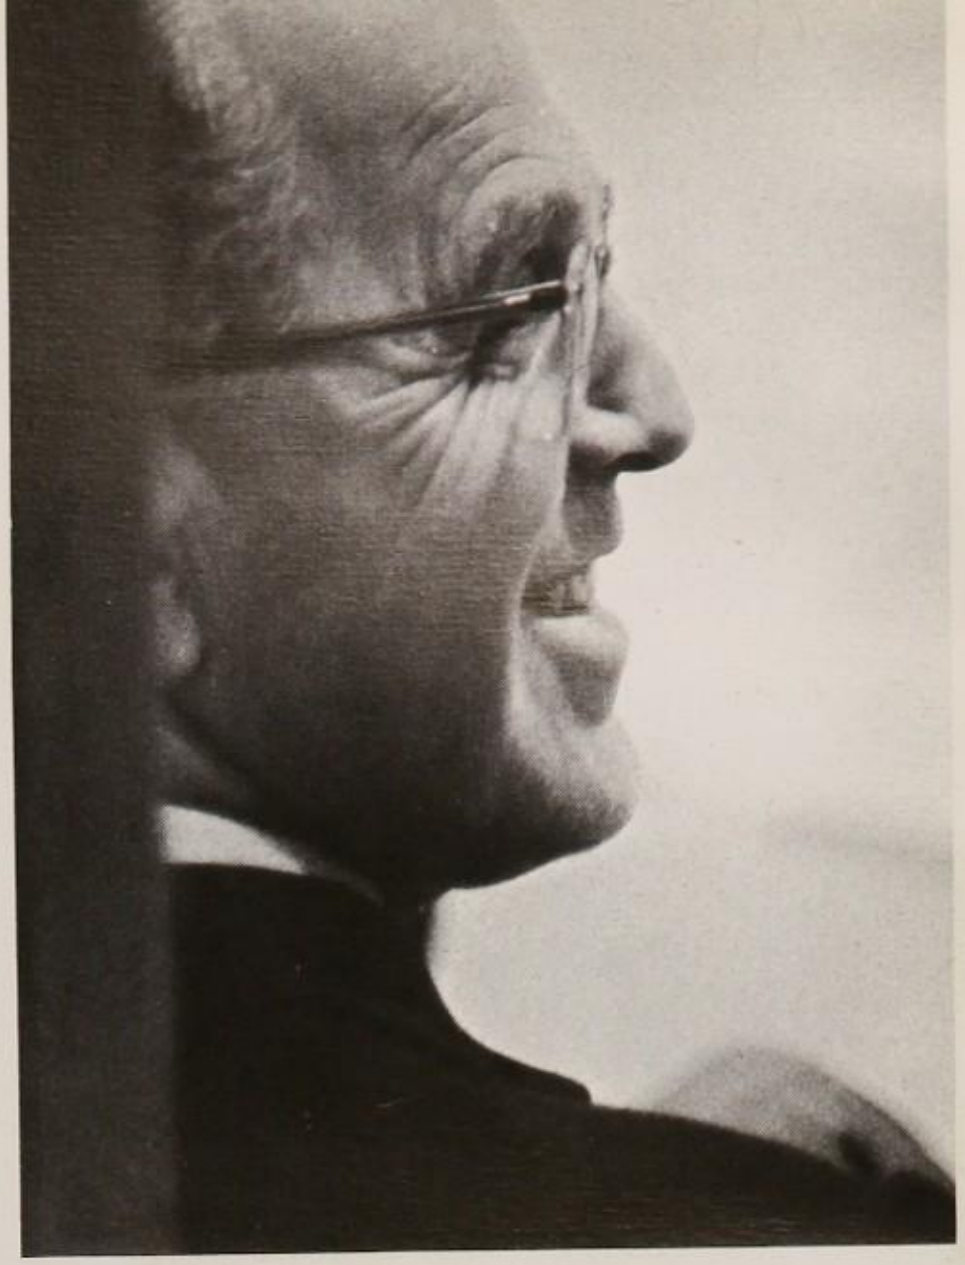
Dr. Chotiner Directs High Point's Movement

Allan I. Chotiner, principal of High Point, is often seen serving in many capacities around the school. Whether discussing a problem with the Student Advisory Council, or meeting with other principals, Dr. Chotiner succeeds in running an efficient school. Having guided High Point since its opening in 1954 — with a small number of students — until the present — with its bulging enrollment — he has seen ever-changing problems and has coped with them.

Dr. Chotiner just this year acquired his Ph.D. in education, illustrating his extensive interest and knowledge in his profession. Once an education training specialist for the Army, Dr. Chotiner's experience ranges from teaching and counseling, to being vice principal at a junior high school.

Dr. Chotiner upholds the "Open Door Policy" at High Point, inviting all students to come to him directly with their problems and questions. He is always ready to help and advise the students and faculty of the school.

High Point is a moving place with moving people. But, like all things, the school — the community within a community — needs an able director. Dr. Allan I. Chotiner is just such a director for High Point Senior High School.

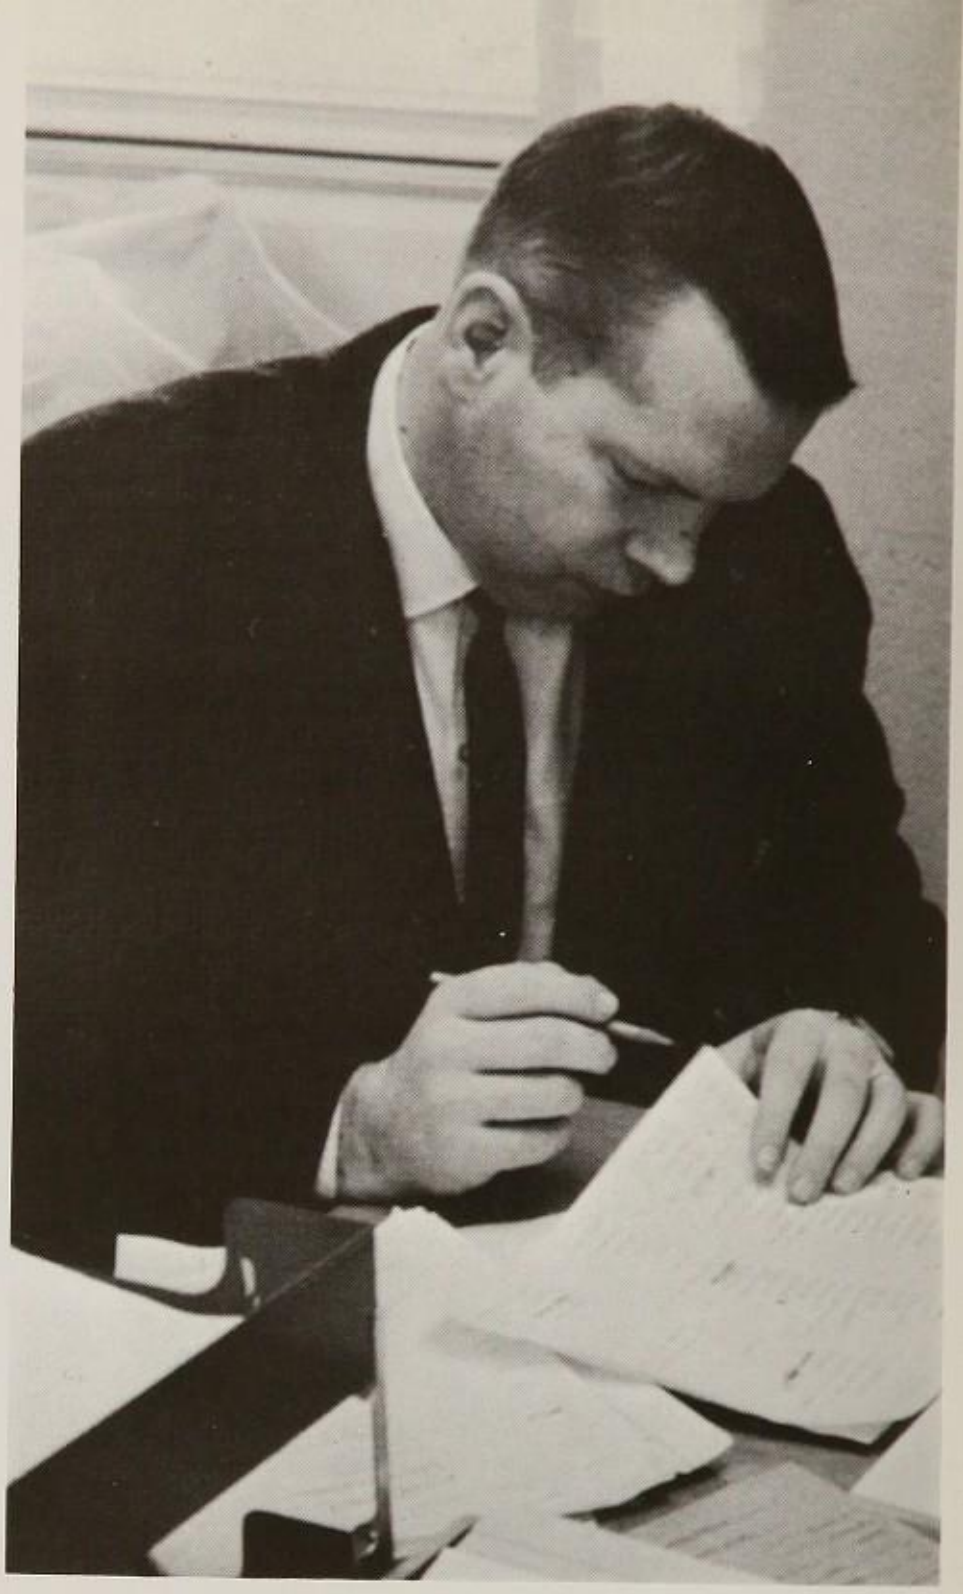


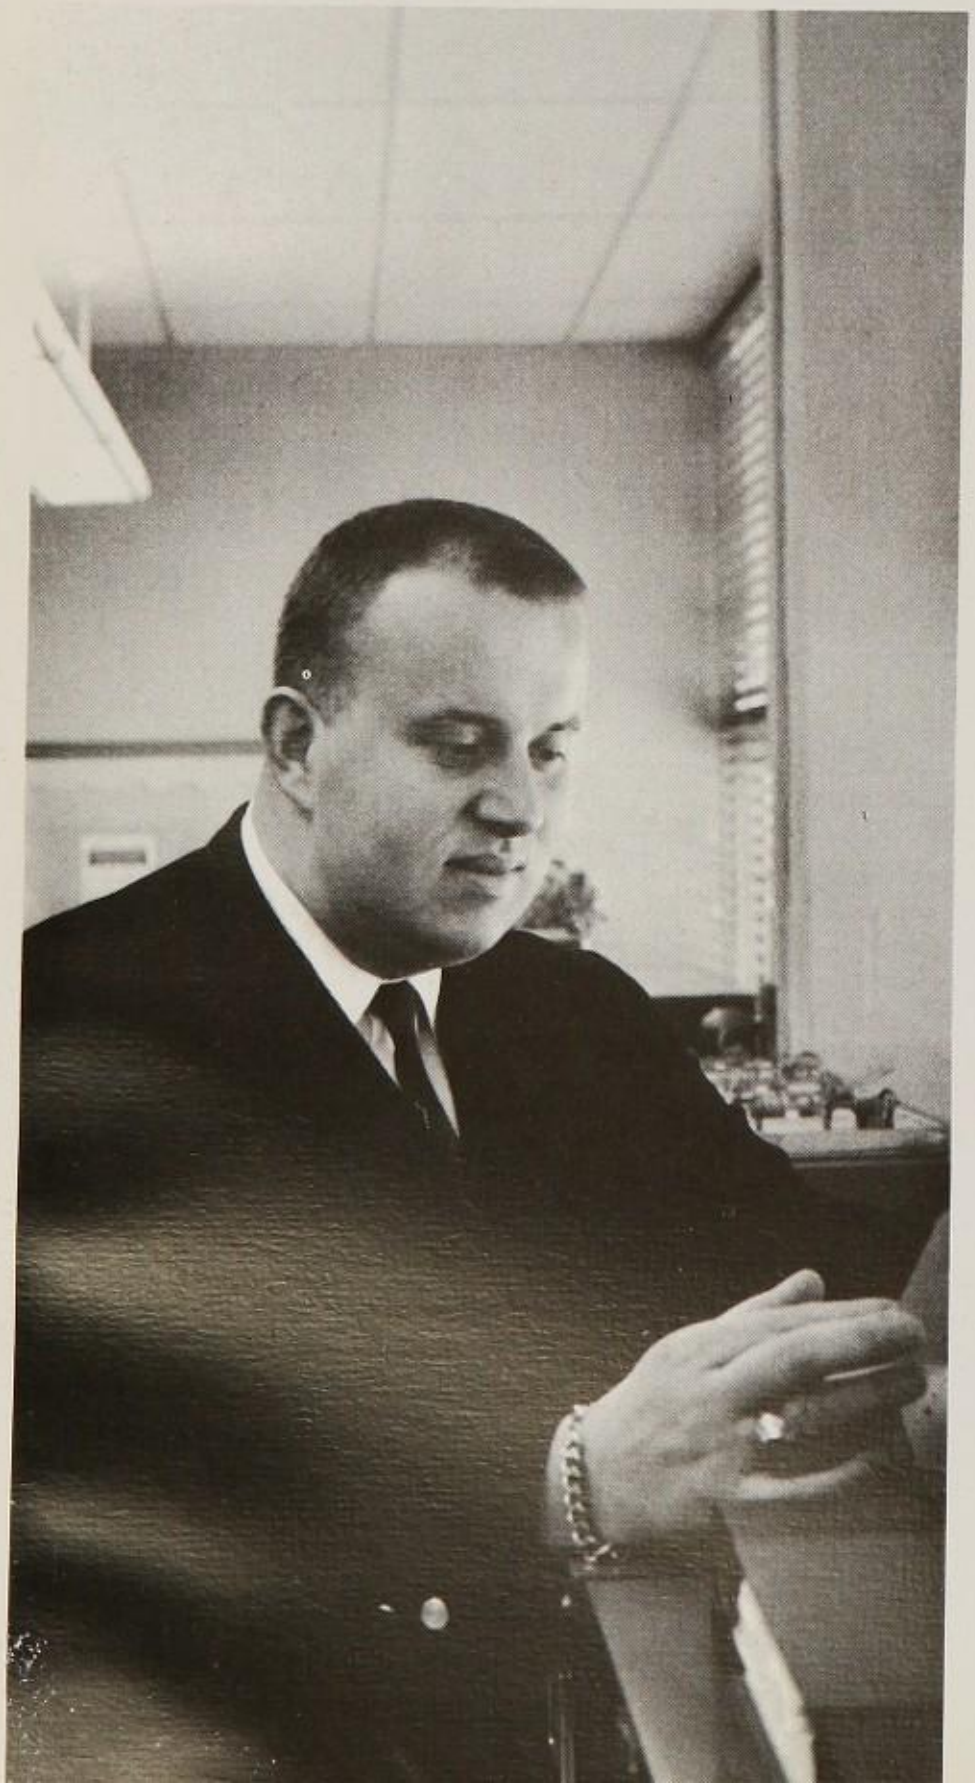
With a pleasant smile, Dr. Chotiner watches the growth and development of the high school he leads.

STUDENT ADVISORY COUNCIL: Clockwise: N. Plachta, K. Jettmar, H. Mensh, D. Fralley, B. Frank, R. Ford, H. Decker, G. Shaffer, Dr. Chotiner, S. Yarnell, P. Vogel, T. Hall, P. Rosenzweig, R. Lambert, A. Lushine, C. Tafoya, D. Thomas.

Mr. Koch, Senior Vice-Principal

Being senior vice-principal means more to Mr. Koch than simply advising twelfth graders. Besides being administrator of senior ring and picture schedules, he is responsible for multitudes of pupils wishing subject changes. He also imparts his creative ingenuity to the well organized school activities calendar. However busy he is, though, Mr. Koch always has time for a friendly joke or an understanding chat with a distressed student.





Mr. Foskey, Sophomore Vice-Principal

In charge of accustoming sophomores with the awesome frontiers of High Point is vice-principal Mr. Foskey. Aside from his job as underclassmen immigation officer, his interest in real estate includes the issuing of permits for entrance into the school to outside agencies and groups. As director of the buses' traffic and schedules, he is metamorphosized into a hardworking transportation officer. A former teacher, he enjoys his present job, as he puts it, "because of the added responsibility."

Miss Comby, Junior Vice-Principal

Being a vice-principal at High Point has been "a gratifying and rewarding experience" for Miss Comby. Encountering different situations every day requires an alert person, one with initiative and perception. With a sense of humor, faith, and a desire to help and to improve the young, Miss Comby meets her obligations by dealing with the students and their problems. Her future goal is to spend more of her time in the classroom.

After receiving B.S. and A.B. degrees at Oklahoma University and an M.A. at George Washington University, Miss Comby did graduate work at numerous universities. Before her arrival at High Point six years ago, Miss Comby taught P. E. at Benjamin Stoddard.

Mr. Corrado, Sophomore Vice-Principal

Factually speaking, he is not a connoisseur of foods, an electronics specialist, nor one who is fulfilling a desire to consolidate an automobile empire. It is just that Mr. Corrado, sophomore vice-principal, is charged with the supervision of the cafeteria, audio-visual materials, and the parking lot.

Having exited from the classroom, he feels that the horizons of gratification can be reached since he is now in a "position to influence various educational practices."

Mrs. Fletcher and Mrs. Taylor not only add their skills to the main office but seem to create a friendly touch too.

Office Workers Increase Efficiency of School

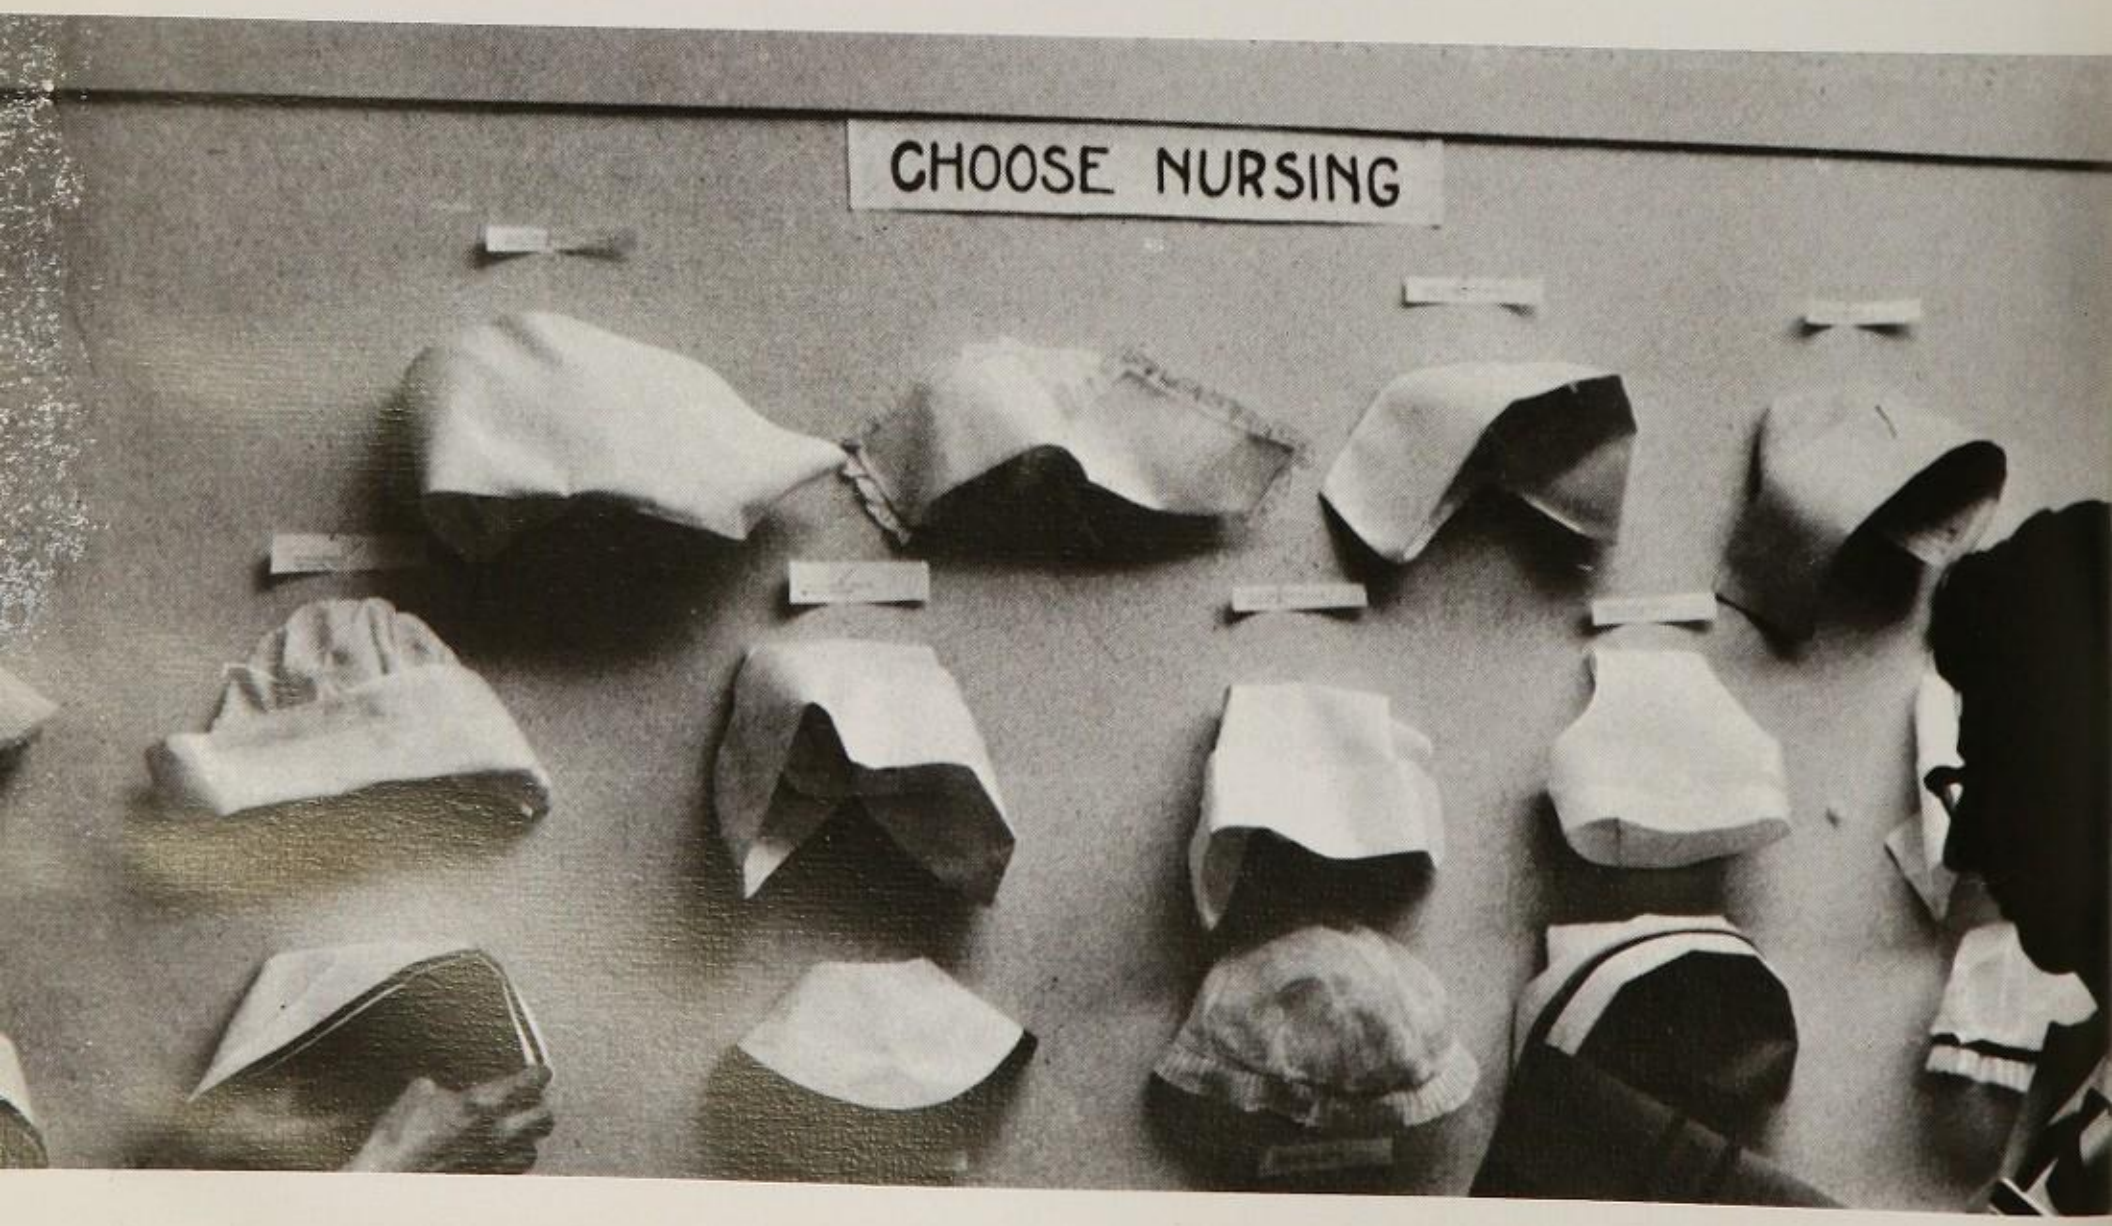
Mrs. Robb, one of the guidance office secretaries, manages to keep operations moving smoothly and to keep a smile on her face.

Operating High Point's IBM room, Mrs. Harvey and Mrs. Attick carry the scoop on each student — even his grades.

Another office secretary, Mrs. Gordon, performs the many duties expected of her here at High Point.

Librarians, H. Gruman, D. Gonthier, L. Moore, and E. Voigt, are surrounded each day by myriads of books as they provide a quiet, well-run reading center for High Pointers and faculty alike.

Always there in case of an emergency involving illness or accident, Mrs. Holton and Mrs. Anderson combine efforts in the health room.



School Staff Aids Growth of Students

With Mrs. Anita Schmidt as head dietician, it is easy to see why the cafeteria staff can work in harmony to prepare and to serve balanced meals to hungry students at lunch time.

As the maintenance staff works under the able direction of Mr. Binns, High Point inhabitants think of them as being synonymous with cleanliness through the school plant.

'Hoot's' Performance

Sprawled on the blanketed floors in the Blue Room, the High Pointers listening to the beat of bongoes and guitars were mesmerized by the atmosphere of the Hootenanny. A barefoot boy with ragged denim jeans swayed in the misty spotlight to a harmonic palette of voices. Folksongs, drum beats, and emcee's jokes contributed to the "fun-in."

The performers created a turned-on time with free-wheeling tones and rhythmic collages. High Point alumni further enlivened the action. Joan Hettenhouser, Mike Lucas, and other "old pros" returned to once again unleash their talents.

Dances Relieve Pressures of

Whenever students wanted to meet their friends and to swing to the beat of a popular band, they attended dances at High Point. These social events provided a change of pace and created an enjoyable atmosphere. To many they served as a means of escape from everyday pressures, confusion, and academic stress.

The Spirit of '70 welcomed sophomores to High Point with a dance following talent performances.

Seniors opened a year of activities with the Senior Ring Dance to which members of the class were admitted free of charge with their newly-acquired rings.

All students were invited to a variety of other dances. Those who paid five cents per half-foot of their height had fun at the UNICEF Dance and benefitted the charity organization at the same time. The Symphonic and Marching Bands welcomed couples to one of the big semi-formal dances of the year — Tropicana. Students who attended the High Point's first Data Dance, had unique experiences when their choices for ideal dates were selected by computer. Participants were matched according to their answers to questionnaires from a computer firm in Boston, Massachusetts. Thus, continuing variety in High Point dances matched the moving mood of the students in 1967-68.

Ellerin Captures Grand

Months of scientific research — negative results, experimental failures, yet true efforts to establish unique scientific principles are all culminated in High Point's 14th annual Science Fair. The students exhibited their research which ranged from the vastness of the fourth dimension — time, to the confines of man's inner mind — dreams. While the spectators who viewed the fair were awed and confused by the projects, the judges subjected the contestants to rigorous questioning on the scientific applicability of their work.

Those who survived the intellectual probing of long years of scientific experience, can be thankful for the inspiration of their teachers—glad for an 'A' in their course, proud of present accomplishments and enthusiastic plaudits, and hopeful of future awards in the County Science Fair. The scientists of tomorrow have probed today's problems and have communicated their knowledge in one display of intellectual curiosity and competence — the Science Fair, 1968.

Pep rally — an afternoon of noise, school spirit, and cheering the team on to victory.

The spectacle of a pep assembly is a sight to behold. Cheerleaders jumped and shouted at the tops of their lungs. Majorettes twirled silver batons and Pom Poms swished their bright yellow crepe paper. The mascot eagerly chased a Wildcat across the gym floor, diminishing it to a kitten. Loudspeakers and trumpets blared as coaches and musicians tried to infuse some spirit mixed with a strong sense of good sportsmanship into the crowd.

The true stars of the assembly, the team members, sat sheepishly, receiving applause. The purpose of a pep rally, informs Mr. Smith, is to "psych up" the team, spurring it on to victory. The theory may not have always proved correct, but High Point's many victories show what a "psyched-up" team can do.

Project First-Step

The merry-go-round is a favorite of First-Steppers.

Every Saturday morning the tranquillity of Holly Park Elementary School is broken by loud voices and the "patter" of little feet. The loud voices belong to High Pointers, and the little feet belong to pre-school children.

In the plan of Project First-Step to prepare the youngsters for a first grade environment, High Point students become "teachers," while the little ones become their "pupils." The children always keep the teachers hopping whether the tots sing a song, climb on a jungle gym, or eat peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. They let their creative energies loose in fingerpainting, blockbuilding, and just "creating" with any and all materials.

Often the teachers enter into the fun and learning along with their young charges. It is not surprising to see a High Pointer on a swing, or with fingerpaint smeared all over his hands. Both the learning and teaching in Project First-Step give the children and teenagers a valuable learning experience.

Symphonic Band, Choir Add Cultural Note

Mr. Smith relaxes at a sectional in preparation for the County Festival.

Under the direction of Mr. Donald Smith, the Symphonic Band prepared a full calendar of recitals including the fall concert at Northwestern, the Christmas program, the spring concert again at Northwestern, and finally the all-important County Festival.

At Christmas the Summit Singers, a group of 16 madrigal singers, serenaded the students in their classes as they wandered through the maze of corridors.

Once again, music lovers enjoyed High Point's Bach Festival. The Bach Choir and High Point musicians delighted the audience of students, faculty, and parents with an evening of the works of Johann Bach. The concert began with several inventions on the harpsichord. The Bach Choir continued with a motet based on the congregational hymn, "Jesus Meine Freude," or "Jesus My Pleasure" accompanied by the harpsichord and the cello.

Artists Display Varied Talents at Luminous, tinted paper flowers astounded viewers of the semi-annual art show sponsored by members of the Studio Art Club. Fractured paisleys hewn from colored paper, various creations of oil paint and water colors set against wild backgrounds were the main attractions. Displays of sculpture and hand-made articles attracted the curiosity of the observers. Fascination marked the faces of these are appreciators who gathered to view the variety of exhibits. Captured talent, voluminous work, and originality were obvious contributions. Each piece offered a unique effect which made inevitable the diversified reactions of the viewers. Comic creations prompted laughter and happy expressions among the art critics, while moods of serenity and sadness enveloped those walking among the serious entries.

Imagination was a requirement for the artists; perplexity, a possibility for the crowd; and contentment, an apparent result for all.

Fralley Reigns Over 1968 Sweetheart Court

A great band, the spirit of Valentine's Day, and a "royal" court of fourteen girls created an evening of "Moonlight and Roses" for the traditional Sweetheart Dance. As the couples danced to the music of the Spades and the Rainbows, master of ceremonies Ron Lambert kept everything moving. Working behind the scenes to make the dance a success were coordinators Pat Simmons and Barbara Plantholt.

Pink and silver hearts and streamers decorated the walls of the Blue Room and cakes, cookies, and punch were served in the Brown Room.

At last the big moment arrived — the crowning of the queen of the Sweetheart Court. The difficult selection was made by a team of judges consisting of Carlton Sickles; Mrs. McCullum, the Fresca girl; Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Maryland; Mrs. Barbara Sacks; Mrs. Crist of the Sears Charm School; and Jerry Anzulovic. The girl chosen as the most poised and charming after being interviewed by the judges, and questioned before attending the dance, was finally announced — a beaming Denise Fralley.

Blue and Gold on Broadway Strikes Hit

Sparked by selections from The King and I, My Fair Lady, and Carousel, Blue and Gold 1968 went Broadway. The Summit Singers, Pom Poms, and modern dancers set the stage with a combined song and dance rendition of "Another Opn'in', Another Show." On a more serious note, talented George Rippon captivated the capacity crowd with an encore performance of "Edelweiss."

The mood of the second night turned toward the pagentry of Blue and Gold. The evening opened with the entrance of last year's queen, Marti Stombaugh Quinn, followed by this year's court. The court and its subjects were again entertained with talent from High Point students and its alumni. The action and the excitement of the night rose to the inevitable climax—the coronation. Gary Shaffer and Pat Simmons were chosen Lord and Lady for the '68-'69 year. Jim Doss and Bonnie Mendelsohn filled the seats of Duke and Duchess. The zenith of the evening was reached when Russell Reid and Joyce Zanelotti were proclaimed King and Queen to reign jointly in the coming year. for Challenging Nine Game Schedule

Smack! Pow! Ooof!

Reflexes slowed by a summer's vacation pushed equally stiff muscles back into shape under a hot August sun. High Point's football team faced a tough season after physical injuries, academic casualties, and the heavy toll of graduation cut deeply into the ranks of experienced players. But as the bodies grew stronger and the timing returned, the boys kept their cool and looked ahead to the augmented nine game schedule. Preseason scrimmage victories over Northwood and Landon brightened prospects considerably. Blessed with the usual depth in running backs, Coach John Voight scanned the scene for an adequate quarterback. Sophomore Skip Stombaugh got the nod and joined seniors Ken Caulder and Tom Pakenham and junior John Brown in the first string backfield. Co-captain Mike Krages led an experienced front line, dominated by seniors Tom Allison and Bob Stransky, and flanked by ends Doug Haley and John Sampson. A tough defense featured senior lettermen George Bilmanis and Mike Scott.

Bladensburg, Oxon Hill Down Flying Eagles

The Eagles got off to a flying start with senior halfback Ken Caulder supplying the scoring punch. Caulder displayed his versatility by scoring the first four touchdowns of the season on a punt return, a TD pass, and runs of three and twenty yards as High Point shut out Good Counsel 16-0 and edged DuVal 14-13. Bladensburg's Jeff Barnes and Oxon Hill's Gary Nestico were thorns in the Eagles' sides during the next two contests, both of which H.P. dropped by close margins. First year squad Potomac could not contain a bruising ground game as High Point evened its league record at 2-2. Eventual County Champ Crossland came from behind to defeat the injury-plagued gridders. High Point found Suitland no match, and followed up with a hard-fought shut out of Bowie. Sticky fingers on the part of Northwestern's Wildcats spelled doom for H.P. as the Eagles found three aerials coming back at them in unfriendly hands. No appreciable offensive was mounted until the fourth quarter after NW had put the game on ice.

Clash With NW

Passed off as a team rebuilding in an off year, High Point still managed to score a few upsets and finish the season in fourth place with five wins and four losses. Injuries plagued the Eagles throughout the season, and only extra effort on the part of sophomore and junior replacements kept the team in contention until the final weeks of the season. Coach Voight is looking ahead, since the heavy reliance on underclassmen this year should enable High Point to field one of its strongest teams ever next year.

Terry Thomas provides the margin of victory in the DuVal game.

"Hut! . . . Hut! . . . Hut!"

Center Rusty Walker snaps the ball to quarterback Larry Grasso, who rolls right and hits end Tommy Johnson in the end zone. So it went for the baby Eagles in most of their games, as victories over Du-Val, Bladensburg, Suitland, and Potomac earned the jayvees third place in the nine-team county league. From the opening practice sessions in August to the closing games in November, Coach Cantanese's boys upheld the High Point tradition of excellence in athletics.

Crack! The gun sounds and the runners patch out and slip into positions around the first turn. As the field spreads out, it is easy to pick out our Eagle Harriers Charlie Brown, Bill McCollough, and Mike Abramson battling for the lead. That's basically the story for '67, as High Point defeated all but three of their opponents en route to a third-place finish in the county. The Eagles enjoyed what coach Jack Willard called "a successful season — the boys tried real hard."

Best Season Yet

Big time wrestling finally came to High Point. A heartbreaking 18-20 loss to Surrattsville was the Eagle's only setback as they mopped up the other county competition for a 9-1 record. Paced by the undefeated trio of Brad Matters, Russell Reid, and Jim Doss, H.P. surprised many fans with their strongest showing ever. Things were looking up as Coach Robert Smith and the matmen prepared for the county tournament.

Best County Finish Ever Prepares Matmen For Tough Rematch with Surrattsville

A league leading five champions earned host High Point its most successful finish ever in the County Wrestling Tournament. Hopes for a first place finish were dashed by Chuck Friday's broken hand, but excellent performances by Steve DiCarlo, Tom Pakenham, Jim Doss, and Bob Stransky kept the Eagles in contention for most of the tourney. Brad Matters placed second at 123 pounds and Jim Graham, Dave McPherson, and Mike Forman earned third place medals in their weight classes. Team Captain Russell Reid closed out his second straight undefeated season against county competition and captured the tournament's "Outstanding Wrestler" trophy.

In the District Meet at Walt Whitman High School, Surrattsville, DuVal, and High Point impressively represented Prince George's County by placing first, second, and fifth respectively in a tournament of twenty-three teams. High Point's first place winner Russell Reid and runners-up Jim Doss and Bob Stransky bolstered a strong Eagle showing.

Senior Brad Matters closes out an undefeated dual match season.

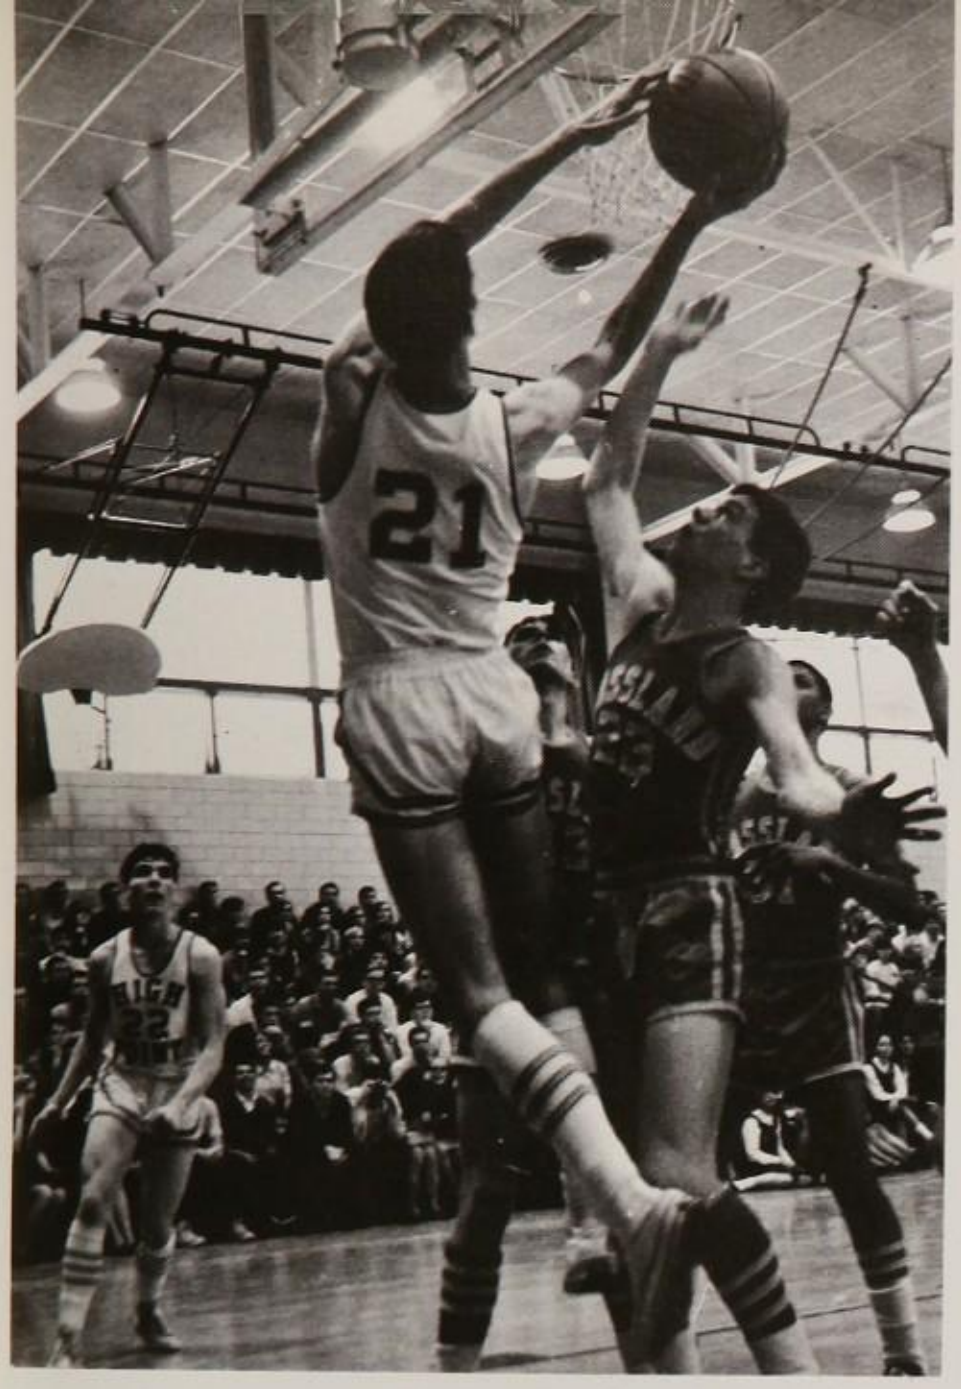
Closing Rush Leaves Eagles in Third Place

A fluctuating season came to an end. A 13-7 record was a slight disappointment from previous years, but the play of the starting juniors indicated a bright future for next year's team. Inexperience caused early season problems, but the final weeks showed a more rounded and matured basketball team. Coach Crawford again showed the strain of a long season, but it was his dedication above all else that produced the inspiration and desire that marked High Point's '67-'68 basketball team.



Crossland finds the Eagles' fast break tough as senior Paul Higgins nets two.

Erratic Eagles Remain Darkhorse for County Title

"Jump ball, jump ball, get it, get it!" The referee's flick of the wrist sends the ball skyward and the two lanky centers strain to reach it while center court becomes a blur of action. An exciting center jump such as this was the only safe prediction for the 67-68 Eagle basketball team. Several promising underclassmen complemented four returning lettermen as the unpredictable Eagles went after the elusive county championship.

Upset victories spiced the early games. The Eagles easily defeated Montgomery Blair and Bladensburg and came from behind to edge Northwestern in a tight defensive battle. But the Wildcats remained in first place as High Point dropped two league games by a total of three points to Oxon Hill and DuVal. The loss of sophomore forward Ron Temple put additional pressure on high scorers Earl Higgins and John Krashoc as Coach Crawford and the b-ballers strained for a second wind down the season's homestretch.

Good Pitching, Tough Defense Spark '68 Diamondmen

It happens every spring! The clatter of cleats, the smacking of balls, and the knocking together of bats can only mean one thing — it's baseball season again. With a tight defense and clutch hitting by all members of the squad, High Point was a sure contender for the County Championship taken last year by DuVal.

High Point's hopes for a county title were reinforced by the return of ace pitcher Larry Feltner, who had been sidelined by a severe illness. Prospects were even brighter as Bob Harnest led a defense as strong as any in the county. "I have never seen so many good infielders on the same team at the same time," marvelled Coach John Huffman. Good hitting complemented a strong mound corps led by Steve Keithly and Skip Stombaugh. Returning lettermen Bob Harnest, Mike Scott, Bruce Hutchinson, Merle Colglazier, Rick Katz, and Chick Katz gave the Eagle diamondmen the advantage of experience.

Senior stickman, John Johnston tees off the 1968 season.

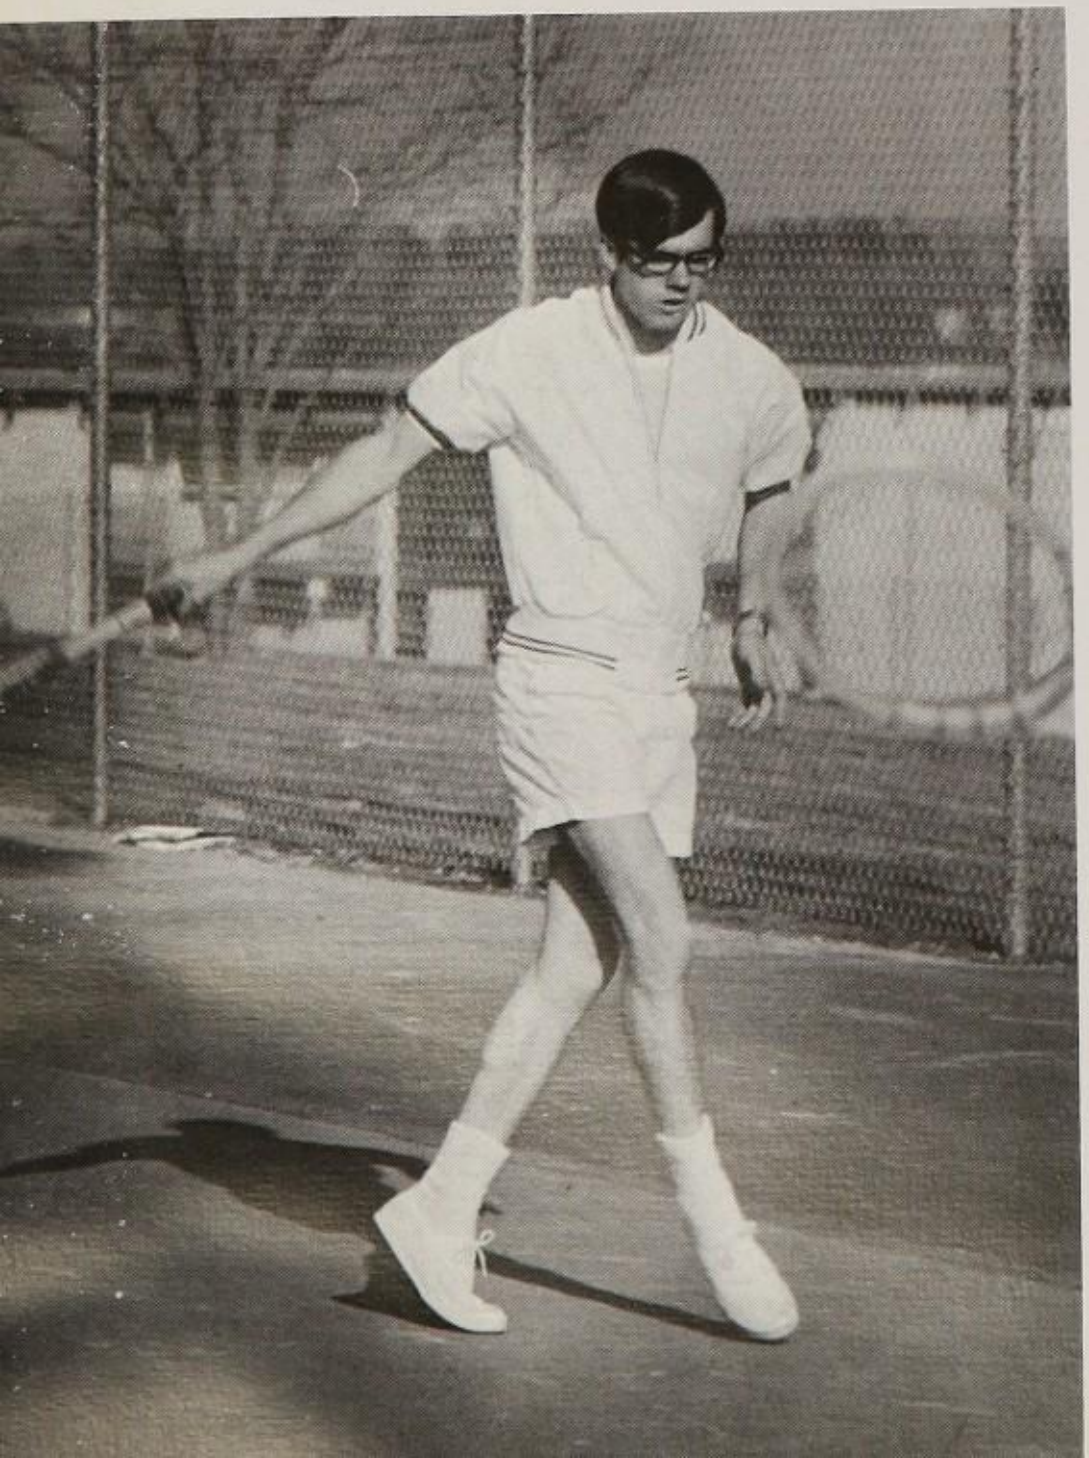
Inexperience Hinders High Point's Golfers

High Point's infamous "hack" squad blasted onto the scene as this year's team returned inexperienced, but determined to improve on last year's second place finish. Leading H.P.'s golfers were the number one man, the number two man, the number three man, the number four man, the number five man, and the number six man.

The most important thing stickmen think about is not winning and not the coach, as everyone thinks, but the caddies. Nobody wants to lug their big, heavy golf bags around the course — let some underclass sucker carry it. He won't say anything — he's getting out of class twice a week. The duffer's determination can only be compared to the magnetism of a glass of tomato juice. After all, you've got to admit that it takes a nut to hit a goofy little white ball over (?) water, through woods, over rocks and barren desert into a little cup that's stamped into someone's lawn that's had a crewcut. The truth was never let out last year, but one of H.P.'s stickmen is still wandering through the mile-long fairways at Crofton's golf course. The golf team fulfilled all of Mr. Smith's expectations this year by showing up at all of the golf matches.

Perfect form at the tee is demonstrated by Denny Voorhees as Bob Ohm looks on.

To the tennis player, the net is the barrier between defeat and victory.



Don ("Crazylegs") Cooper warms up with his version of the "Charleston" before the match with Bowie.

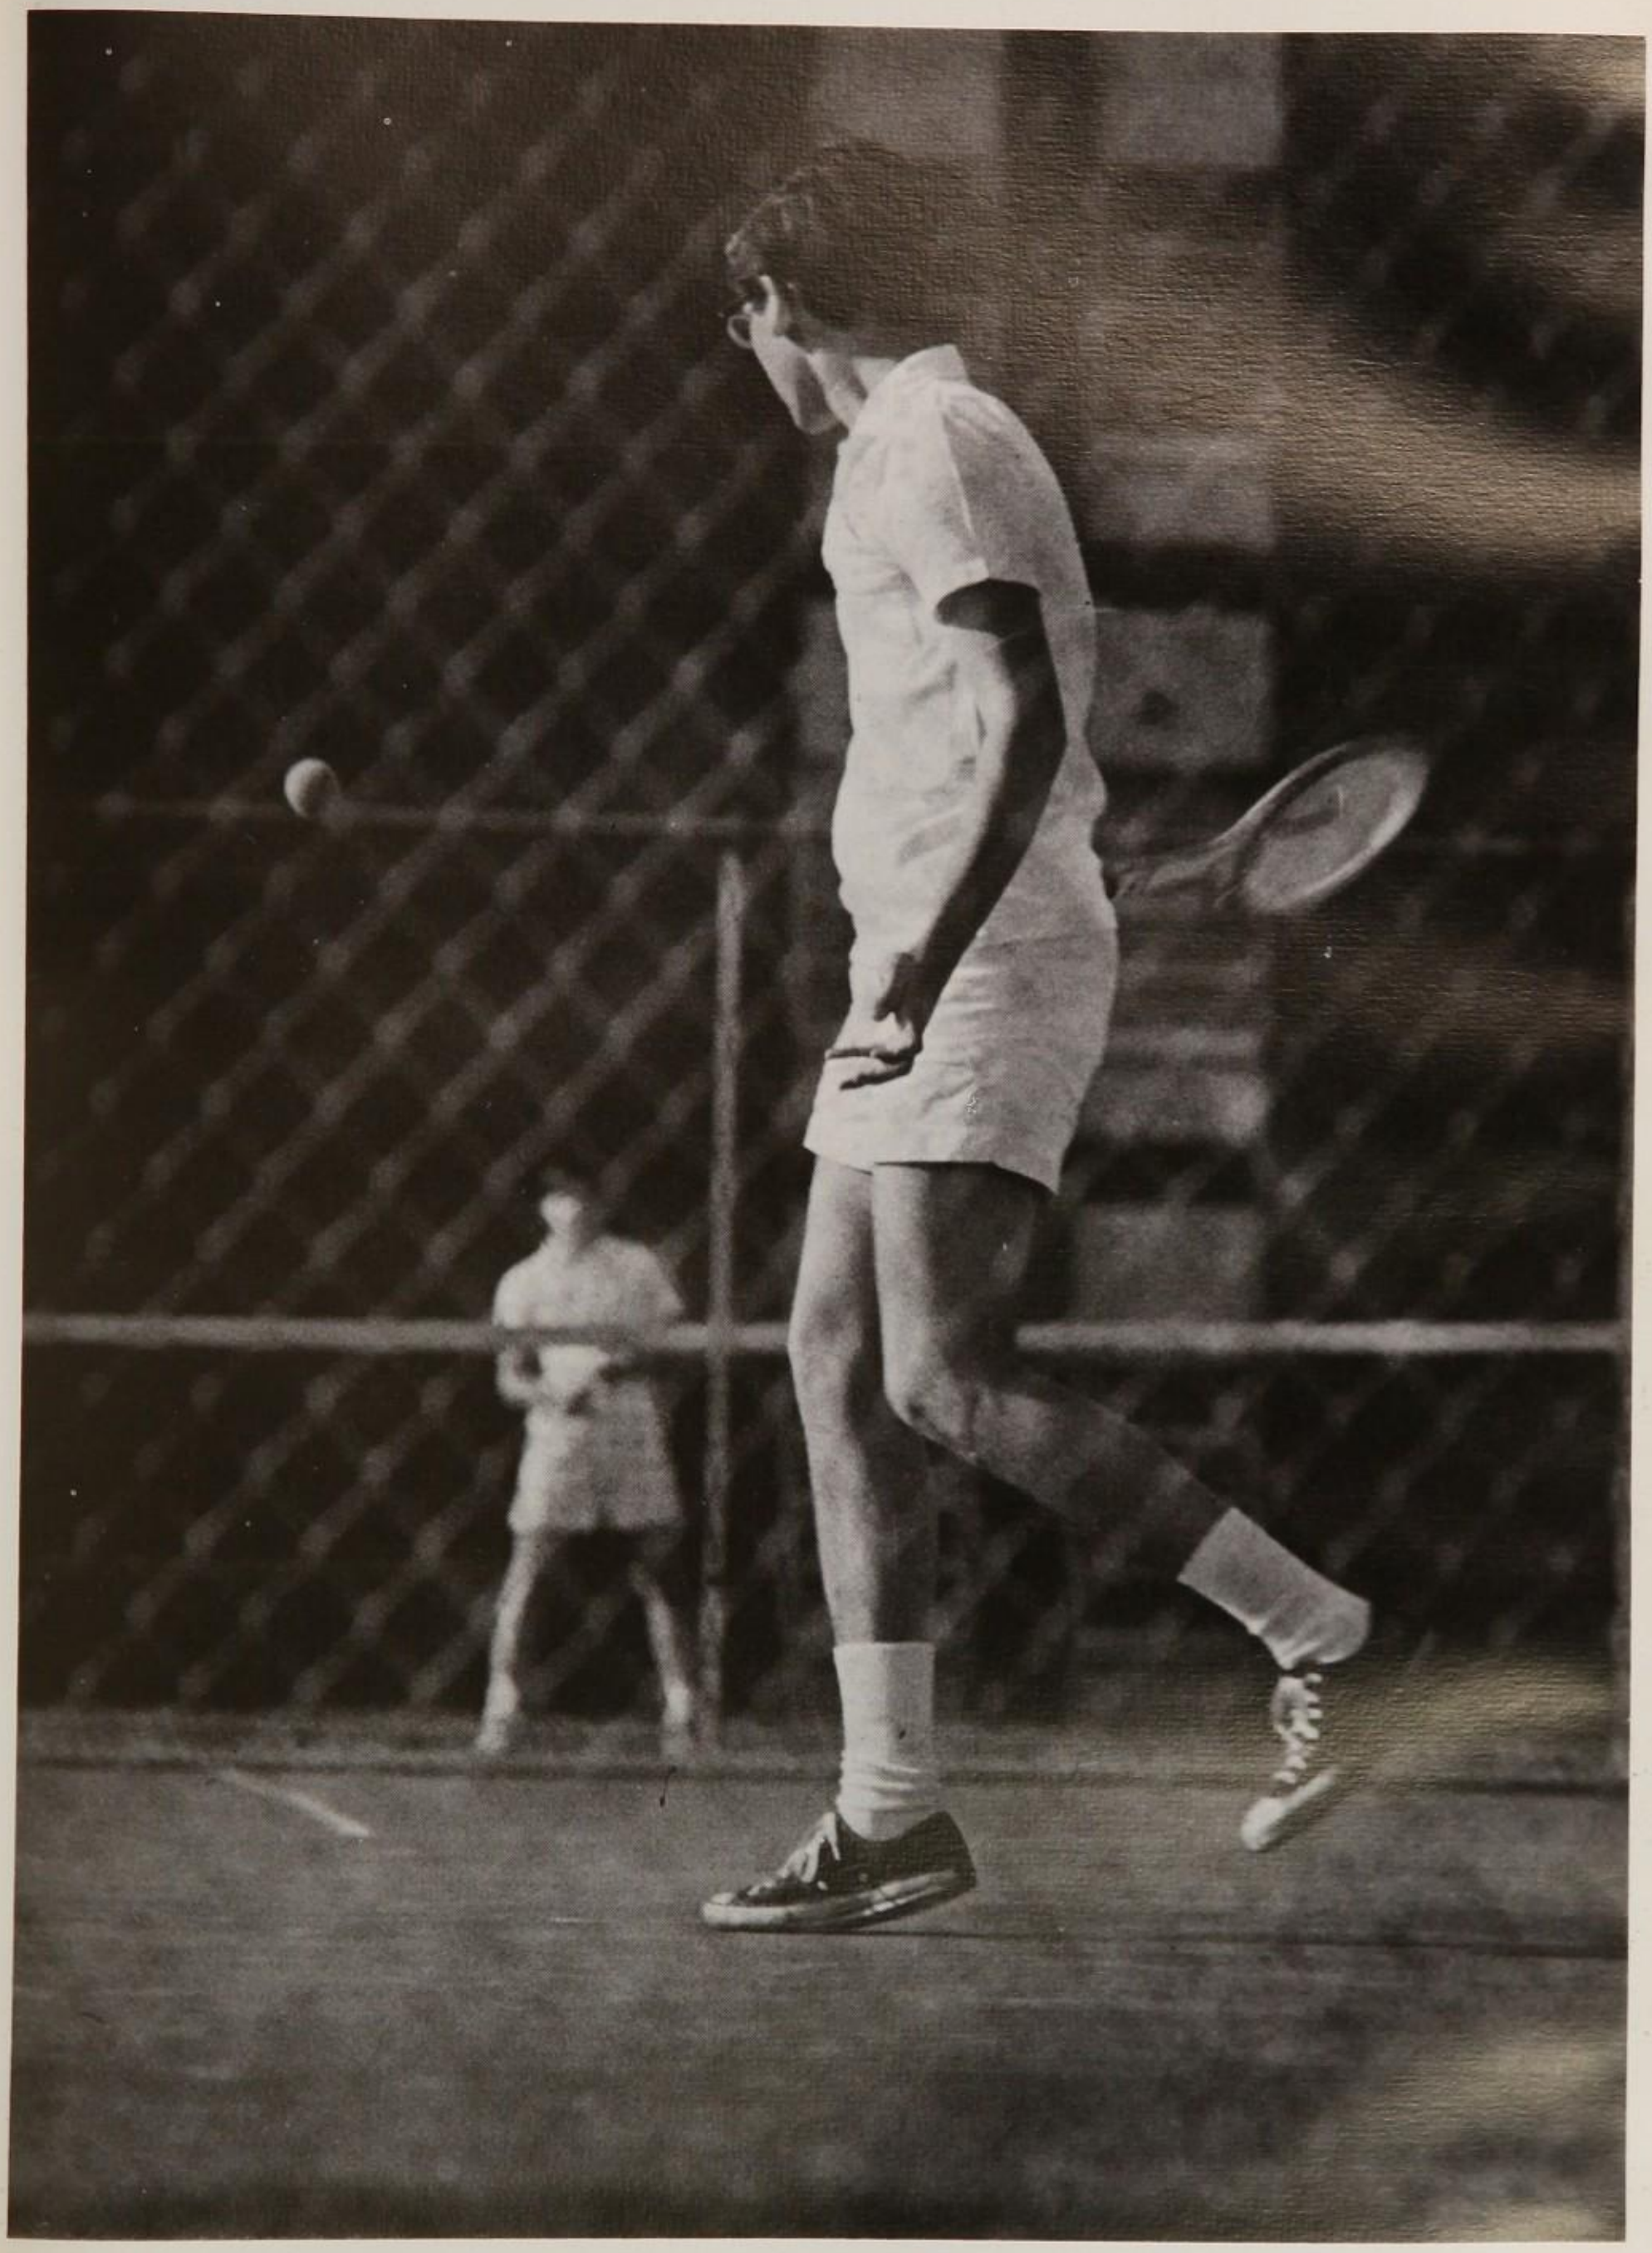
Netmen Anticipate Good Season As Six Lettermen Return

The fight for the top six positions commenced once again as the H.P. tennis players began their large-scale version of ping-pong. Recovering from last year's broken leg (sustained after jumping over the net after winning a match), senior Don Cooper aimed for an undefeated season (providing the net would be lowered after each victory).

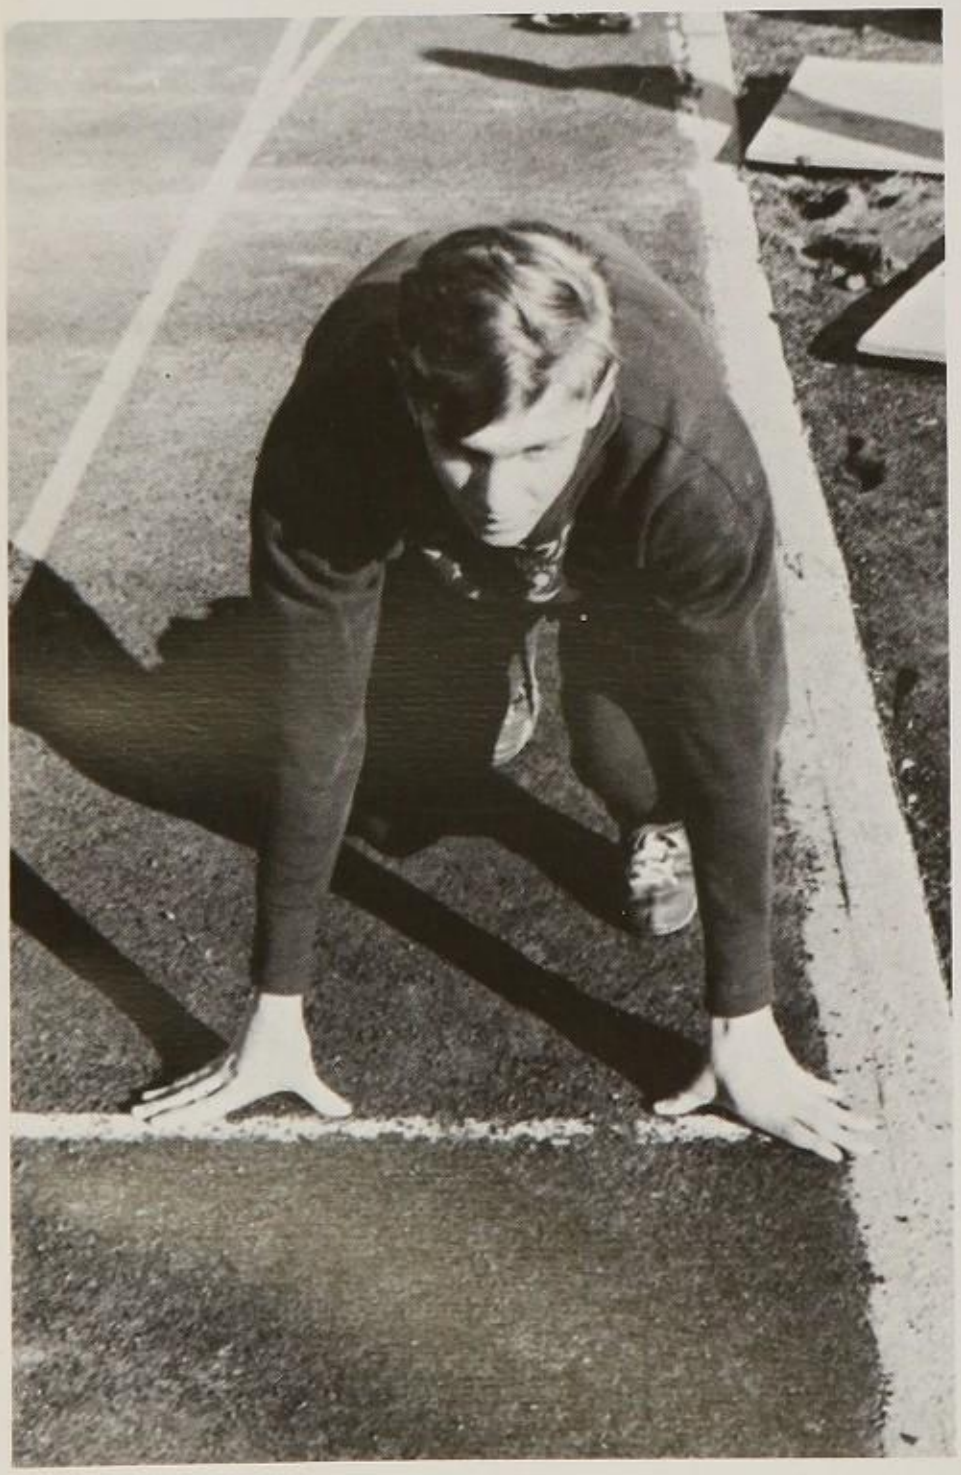
Mike Simball split six sets with Iron Issac, the pitching machine, much to the amusement of Walter Lee and Mitch Fohl, who returned to better their previous year's record. Both accomplished this feat by almost flunking off the team.

Returning letterman Dave Cherry was stringing his Hong Kong racquet with cat-gut when an Eyry staffer asked him how many other letter-winners were back on the team to try again this year. Quick-witted Dave thought a moment and replied "Yes!"

As the season got under way, Coach Voight hoped for many awards for his fine team. The only certainty was school-wide recognition as High Point's noisiest team — Everyone knows you can't play tennis without raising a racquet!



Senior Phil Rhodenbaugh limbers up by taking a few high hurdles.



Victory begins at the starting line.

Style, grace and poise are the marks of a good hurdler.

Women Teachers Trounced In Student-Faculty Game

The world is faced with many problems — Republicans vs. Democrats — male vs. female. In fact, statistics prove that half the married couples are men. of course, it hasn't been decided which half are the men — yet. At this level of maturity, students are unconcerned with these trite matters. Well, most students anyway.

But there is one problem that all High Point students are agreed upon — that of the administration just being the administration. This problem has been solved every year by the annual Student-Faculty Basketball Game, where the seniors get a chance to break even after twelve years of back-breaking work, and the senior task of bending over to pick up Mr. Gough's brownie points.

The crowd yelled with enthusiasm as the lettermen led the cheers. A lot of statements were overheard, commenting on the fact that Bob Nolf should have been a cheerleader instead of a wrestler.

The most remembered event of the evening is probably Miss Keene. With the graceful moves (and tail) of a cat, Miss Keene went on the prowl against the female students.

Female students proved that they could beat the faculty at something and the male game was an exciting battle between faculty and seniors.

"Leaders" of High Point initiated an attempt to establish a body in which students could take an active part in organizing, supervising, and controlling their own affairs. Students were given the opportunity to participate as members of Student Council Committees. These committees, which included Student Welfare, Publicity, Student Recognition, Elections, Orientation, and Safety, coordinated school relations.

Elected Student Council Officers, representatives, and senators met bi-monthly after school, studying the aspects of student service and school affairs. This year's Student Council sponsored and promoted activities for the "Now" generation as it unified the student body.

Students who wished to nurture their theatrical abilities joined the Drama Club. Under the careful guidance of Mr. Anzalone, members aided in the outstanding production of "The Sound of Music."

Only students with extraordinary achievements in some phase of dramatics were invited to join H.P.'s Thespian Troupe. Besides the cast of productions given at H.P. students who participated in stage crews were also eligible for membership. Thespians displayed their acting ability when they represented H.P. in various contests.

Student Publications Provide Helpful Experience

Panic . . . another Beacon deadline! As students awaited their monthly issue of the Beacon, editors wrote that last headline or finished the final story. Final dates were always met so students could discover the latest news tips. Journalism II students were behind-the-scenes, covering stories and expressing their views concerning school policies. Features, news releases, sports breaks, and editorials were all a part of the news-paper coverage — a learning experience for the High Point journalists.

Talented students expressed themselves in prose, poetry, and art in the Laureate, High Point's literary magazine. Staff members, under the direction of the editor, worked diligently to produce a creative publication.

to H.P.

Brightened by the sound of harmonious young voices were assemblies and concerts throughout the year. Concert Choir, Summits, and Harmonettes enlivened the spirit of such programs as Christmas and Brotherhood Assemblies, Blue and Gold Night, Senior Night, and the Fall and Spring Concerts with their music. Melodious notes and perfect harmony were their winning combination.

A different kind of musical ability was displayed by the Folksinging Club, as members met to blend their talents in a songfest of folkmusic.

Teams

"Thunder! Thunder! Thunderation! We're the best team in the nation . . ." Enthusiastically supporting High Point's teams, the Pep Club enlivened spectator participation with wild screams and hopeful cheers. Building up to Homecoming, the Pep Club sponsored Spirit Week in November.

Spirits were always lifted when High Point's mascot, the Eagle, flapped her blue and gold feathers. Known as the symbol of our victory fighters, the Blue and Gold Bird prompted cheerful response to back HP teams.

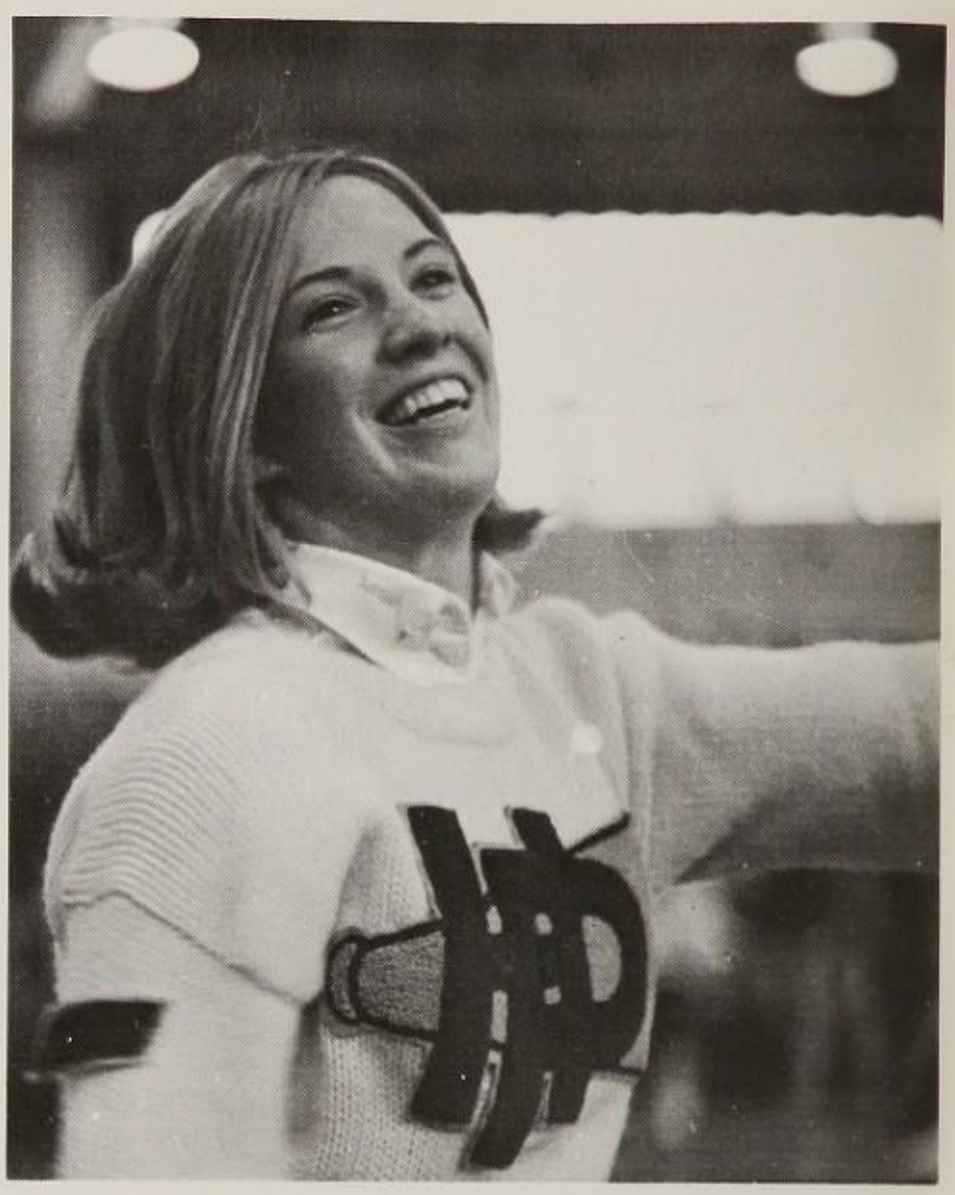
Throughout the year lettermen helped to supervise the seating of students in the boys' gym for assemblies and basketball games. They could also be found helping with the supervision and ticket taking at football and baseball games. They turned actors for Blue and Gold Night, and humorous cheerleaders at the Student Faculty Basketball Game.

High Point's mascot, Elaine Michaels, boosts spirit along with the cheerleaders.

PEP CLUB: Deana Rose, alternate mascot, leads the Pep Club in a cheer.

Cheerleaders

Captain Pat Simmons and Co-Captain Joyce Zanelotti execute an Eagle jump.



Senior Cheerleader Donna Denny smiles enthusiastically during pep rally.

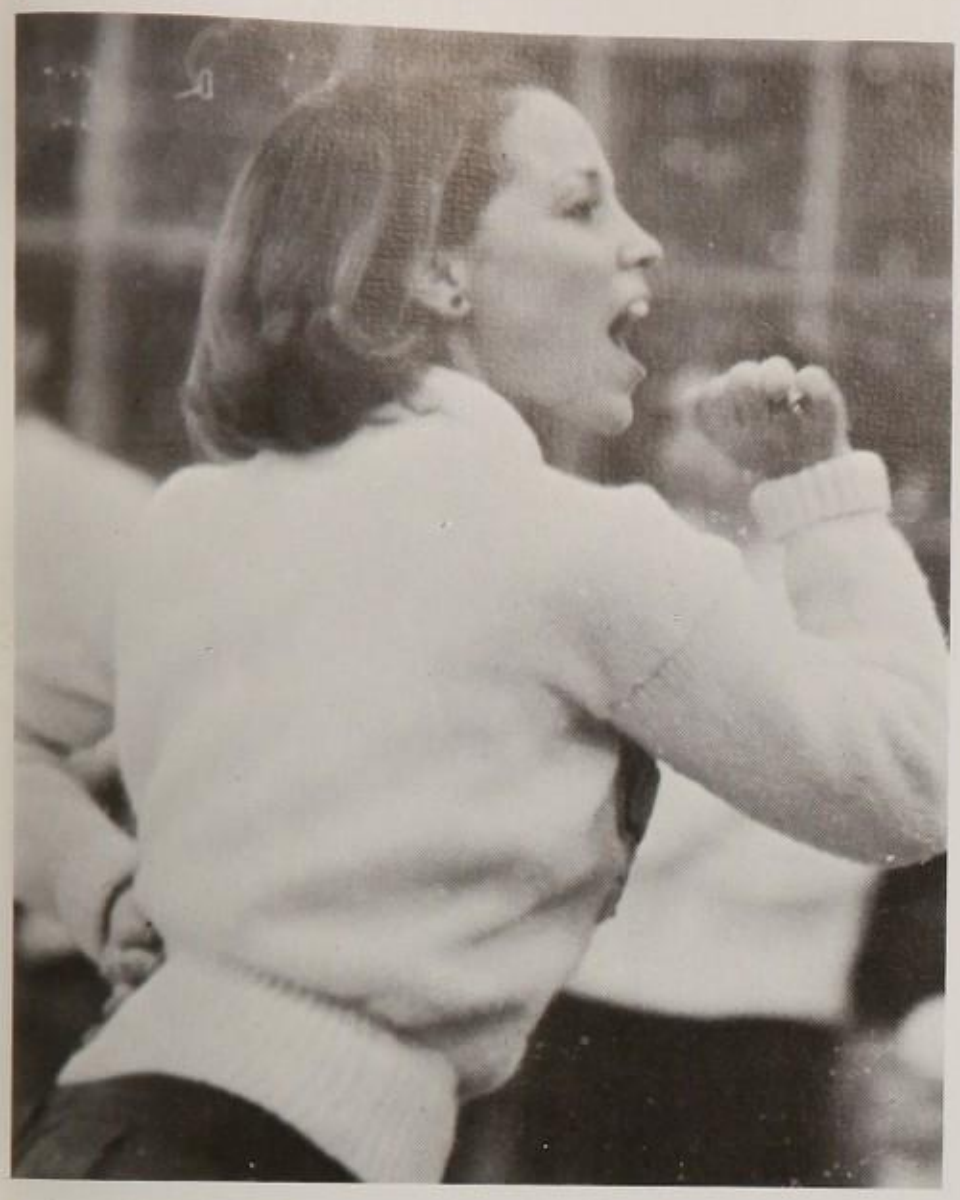
Electrify School with Spirit



"Two bits, four bits, six bits . . . ," shouts Bonnie Mendelsohn.

"Come on Gold, come on Blue, come on team—fight it through . . .", yelled cheerleaders as the High Point Eagles charged down football fields and raced down basketball courts. As tension mounted, exuberant fans led by cheerleaders promoted spirit and inspired our Eagles to victory.

JV Cheerleaders, following the footprints of the varsity squad, built enthusiasm and moved our JV basketball team to triumph.

Other action-packed activities—hops, pep assemblies, and the Homecoming Dance—were coordinated by the cheerleaders, with assistance from the JV squad.

Classes

An ordinary crowd? Not this one—members of classes who have purchased passports to the greatest year
yet . . . a year with class activities coming on strong . . . each class setting its own get-away goals . . .
translating old rules in a new way . . .
each class having a distinction of its own . . .
welcoming new members . . .
becoming acquainted . . .
part of the happening
life . . .
together they turn the key . . .
unlocking doors to status . . .
turning off old ideas . . .
as new ideas are turned on . . .
ideas contributing to great moments shared among members . . .
always to be remembered.

Newcomers . . . lost in the confusion of the first day . . . exploring the unknown . . . occasionally bewildered, but eventually adjusting to the student life at High Point . . . joining routines of action . . . eager to participate, yet hesitant and uncertain . . . catching, maintaining the pace . . . "You said 'AT' means 'academically troubled'?" . . . starting the year off right with the election of competent class officers and representatives . . . initiating new trends . . . following old ones . . . accepting established ideals . . . striving to better those ideals . . . supporting the many traditions of High Point . . . hopeful . . . determined . . . taking part in sophomore activities . . . all High Point activities . . . trying to gain recognition in a class of almost 1,000 . . . JV cheerleaders . . . adding spirit to High Point team competition . . . that biology course . . . faints and formaldehyde . . . "I think I'll call my frog Irving" . . . gym class . . . sharing lockers . . . aftermath of all those push-ups . . . English II . . . a taste of Shakespeare . . . fear turns to courage . . . confidence . . . desire to obtain a worthwhile position . . . working to achieve set goals . . . to make the Sophomore Class the best in High Point history . . . a successul year is completed, and the class of '70 takes its place in the student body . . . Sophomores step up . . . Juniors now.

Eyry Reflects '67-'68 School Year

Deadlines met and nerves shattered, the 1968 Eyry staff settled down to recuperating from a hectic year. Members of the staff learned a new meaning of responsibility as they conquered the difficulties of working as a team and racing with time to finish the required work.

Memories of a wild senior year are even more vivid to a group of people who work on a yearbook such as the Eyry. Sketching layouts, composing copy, and snapping pictures drummed events of 1967-68 into the minds of the Eyry staffers.

The booming sales of the 1968 Eyry made staff members proud of their creation. Anticipation of the arrival of the bound pages was evident in room 200 during second period every day where staffers buzzed busily around trying to get something accomplished.

Without the confusion, the talent, and the help of those pictured on these two pages, you would now be leafing through 276 pages of blank paper.

Rita Ford, Editor-in-Chief

Photography staff members Ralph Fernandez and Richard Brandman capture a significant moment for the pages of the Eyry.

Mia Lichtenberg, Assistant Editor-in-Chief

Leaving the hallways of motion, the high school student reminisces . . .
the excitement of the first day . . .
his first word in Russian . . .
the night football games . . .
the intricacies of his personal life . . .
the intimate moments . . .
the crowded lunch room . . .
the drudgery of homework . . .
his 20 hour term paper in one night . . .
he remembers all — but he presses onward . . .
he is different somehow . . .
older . . .
wiser . . .
he has found answers . . .
he has fallen short of goals . . .
he will continue . . .
he has become an individual . . .
a member of the
Now Generation.

Through the ever-open doors of the high school pass
tomorrow's leaders — members of the
Now Generation.

John,
It has been nice knowing you this year, we've had some cool times in HomeRoom. Next year will be even better 'cause we'll be seniors!! Have fun this summer and be good (ha!)
Margie '69

John
I hope you stay the same as this year and not give me a hard time. Maybe we will get a class together
Love
Barbara

John,
If it hadn't been for Barb, I wouldn't have had the opportunity to meet you. It's really been nice knowing you. Have a really swell guy even though you're a Red Sox fan. Have a hard time! Good Luck!
